NAT. LABOUR MEMBER ON BETRAYAL

London, Yesterday.

Mr. Harold Nicholson, National Labour M. P. for West Leicester, in a speech yesterday, declared that there will be peace for six months only.

"We have betrayed a little, courageous country," he declared.

"Many believe that we have achieved peace for a generation. They are mistaken."

Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal leader, said that the safety of Europe does not rest with the League but with the four powers at the Munich conference, but the power and will of Hitler is the dominating factor among them. — Reuter.

CROWN OF THORNS

Prague, Yesterday.

A statement broadcast from the Prague Radio describes the Munich agreement as a great injustice to a nation which has always served the cause of peace and has gone to extremes of self-denial in order to show its goodwill and desire for good relations with its neighbours.

All the Czechoslovak nation has received is a crown of thorns.

Nevertheless the life of the Czechoslovak Republic is not closed by the Munich conference. — Reuter.

"National Aim Achieved By Peaceful Means"

Berlin, Yesterday.

The German press hails the Anglo-German declaration as the beginning of a better future in which the two nations will never again cross swords, but will live in peace and security in a spirit of mutual confidence.

The "Voelkischer Beobachter" says: "Whether the final peace of Europe can be realised or not, the Munich settlement at least has given practical proof that a national aim can be achieved by peaceful means."

The "Boersen Zeitung" speaks of the removal of the nightmare of war being followed by hope of better understanding and co-operation between nations. — Reuter.

POLISH TROOPS MOVE IN AT NOON TO-DAY

Czechs Surrender To Threat Under Protest

PRAGUE, YESTERDAY.

IT IS OFFICIALLY ANNOUNCED THAT THE CZECH GOVERNMENT HAS ACCEPTED, UNDER PROTEST, THE CONDITIONS OF THE NEW POLISH NOTE.

The new note to Prague from Warsaw contained a demand, according to the semi-official Polish News Agency for a definite reply of "Yes" or "No" by noon to-day to the following points:

Firstly, token occupation of Teschen and Silesian territory by noon to-morrow by ceding to Poland, the Czech part of the town of Teschen, Secondly, the rest of Teschen territory to be evacuated by Czech troops and authorities by October 10.—Reuter.

Plebiscite In Other Zones

Warsaw, Yesterday.

Czechoslovakia's acceptance of the terms of the Polish Note which was remitted to the Prague Foreign Office yesterday is confirmed.

The town of Teschen will be transferred to the Polish authorities on Sunday at noon while the remainder of the district will be evacuated by the Czechs within ten days.

As regards other territories claimed by Poland, a plebiscite will be held, details of which will be settled by negotiations with Prague, which has undertaken to discharge immediately all Poles from the Czechoslovak army and release all Poles detained in prison in Czechoslovakia for political offences.

In the official communique, it is stated that the Polish Government is able to announce with great joy that a "painful conflict" between the two nations has been peacefully settled. — Trans-Ocean.

Milder Attitude

Warsaw, Yesterday.

A semi-official declaration by the Polish broadcasting service says the Polish Government had set forth its claims in the clearest possible manner and it was to be hoped that Czechoslovakia would abandon those evasive tactics which had produced such disastrous consequences for itself.

This semi-official declaration attracted much attention in political circles since its tone differed considerably from that of the Saturday morning papers, which threatened immediate military measures for enforcing Poland's demands.

It was believed that friendly advice had been tendered to the Polish Government to adopt, in its turn, methods similar to those adopted at Munich and thus obtain peaceful satisfaction of Polish claims. — Trans-Ocean.

FIRST LORD OF ADMIRALTY RESIGNS

London, Yesterday.

The First Lord of the Admiralty, Mr. A. Duff Cooper, has resigned in a letter to the Prime Minister to-day.

In his letter, Mr. Duff Cooper says: "It is extremely painful to me in the moment of your great triumph to be obliged to strike a discordant note."

"For reasons with which you are acquainted, and which I propose to explain to the Commons in due course, I profoundly distrust the foreign policy which the present Government is pursuing and seems likely to continue to pursue."

"Feeling as I do, I consider that honour and loyalty demand that I should offer you my resignation."

"I do so with profound regret because I have been so proud to hold my present office, one that I have envied above all others in the State, and I have been so grateful to you for having shown me such inviolable kindness and patience."

PREMIER'S REPLY

Mr. Chamberlain replied stating he had received the letter with great personal regret, "but knowing that you are sincerely convinced that the foreign policy of the present Government is mistaken, I agree with you in thinking that it would not be proper for you to remain a member of the Government."

"Before submitting your resignation to the King, I would like to thank you for your work in the great office which you are now giving up, and express the conviction that differences over public policy make no breach in our personal relations." — Reuter.

COMPARED WITH DISRAELI

BOMBAY, YESTERDAY.

"UNDOUBTEDLY MR. CHAMBERLAIN IS THE BIGGEST FIGURE IN EUROPE TO-DAY," WRITES THE "TIMES OF INDIA," WHICH COMPARES HIM WITH DISRAELI.

The newspaper adds that unless Germany changes her present policy, it is difficult to see how permanent peace can be maintained.

The real test of Hitler's good faith will be his response to a responsible approach for general appeasement. — Reuter.

BRITAIN WANTS MORE OBSERVERS

London, Yesterday.

It is understood that the British Government has conveyed a desire that more British military observers be sent to Czechoslovakia.

There are two at present in Czechoslovakia, while six more are to be sent out.

Certain battalions of the British Army are being held ready to go to Czechoslovakia in connection with the Munich Agreement, though the War Office is awaiting instructions, and the name of the battalions and the time of departure from England has not been announced. — Reuter.

MR. LYONS ON OUTLOOK

Canberra, Yesterday.

The Australian Premier, Mr. J. A. Lyons, speaking to journalists here to-day, said he saw real prospects of lasting peace as the outcome of the Munich agreement.

He asked religious denominations to observe Sunday week as a day of thanksgiving. — Reuter.

FRIENDLY ADVICE TO PRAGUE

Berlin, Yesterday.

The first friendly German reference to Czechoslovakia for many weeks appeared in the "Diplomatische Korrespondenz" this morning.

The paper says: "Prague will do well to remember the mistakes of the past, which may well become the starting point for a wholesome and profitable future for Czechoslovakia and the Czechoslovakian people."

The paper describes the Munich agreement as a new start which revives hopes of victory of the principle of justice and equity.

It says that the coming weeks will show that a real democratic spirit reigns, "and we trust, a genuine willingness to give justice and liberty a chance." — Reuter.

DR. IMREDEY TO BROADCAST

BUDAPEST, YESTERDAY.

THE HUNGARIAN PREMIER, DR. IMREDEY, IS BROADCASTING TO-NIGHT DEALING WITH EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK.

He is also expected to appeal for national unity during the "all important" period ahead.

This morning's press is entirely devoted to the situation following the Munich agreement, and mainly presses the Hungarian claims in Czechoslovakia. — Reuter.

SCOTS GUARDS GOING OVER

London, Yesterday.

One of the Guard battalions to be sent to Sudetenland during the handing over to Germany will be a Scots Guards battalion.

The first batch of troops is expected to leave London to-morrow (Sunday), and the remainder will follow on Monday and Tuesday. The troops will travel via Belgium and Germany. — Trans-Ocean.

Germans Cross Frontier At 2 p.m.

Berlin, Yesterday.

German troops, under General von Lees, crossed the former Czechoslovak frontier in the Bohemian forest between Helfenberg and Finsteran to-day at 2 p.m. for the first time. Occupation of the first sector of the Sudeten territory, as defined by the Munich conference, has thus commenced.

It is announced that immediately after the occupation of each sector, the German Reichsbahn will operate the railway services therein. — Trans-Ocean.

CZECHS LEAVE EGER

Aach, Yesterday.

Czech troops and police have evacuated Eger as well as the famous spa Franzensbad, according to reliable reports, which add that their departure is causing great rejoicing. Order is being maintained by members of the Sudeten German party pending the arrival of German troops. — Trans-Ocean.

TIME TABLE SET

Prague, Yesterday.

A time table dealing with the movement of German troops into Czechoslovakia provides for a number of contingents calculated to avoid dangerous incidents. These include a neutral zone between the advancing Germans and the retreating Czechs.

The zone will vary in width between a mile and a mile and a half, according to the nature of the country involved.

Provision has also been made for Czechoslovakian and German officers to maintain contact between the Czech and German troops.

General Krejci, the Czech Commander-in-Chief, has appealed to the Army to do its duty "in these sorrowful days," and not to be led by sentiment. — Reuter.

No Rubber-Necks

Berlin, Yesterday.

It is officially announced that no private persons will be allowed, until further notice, to enter those Sudeten German areas which are to be occupied by German troops.

Exception is made in favour of the inhabitants of regions in question who have sought refuge in Germany and of persons in possession of a special permit from police. — Trans-Ocean.

Romance is not Enough

CURIOUS how those doing the most important work—particularly if they are women—receive the scantiest measure of consideration.

This was brought home to me, not for the first time, but with emphasis, when I visited a busy district nurse in her country home.

It was a fine day and the tiny cottage looked alluringly picturesque with the sunbeams gilding the thatched roof and playing on the spotless chintz curtains.

"How too charmingly quaint!" was the comment of a fellow visitor.

Charming it certainly was to a visitor on a fine day, and quaint as well.

But what a home for a busy woman coming in all hours of the day and night, winter and summer alike!

THERE was no gas, no electricity, no water, no ventilation in that "quaint" little cottage. And this for a woman who by instinct and training, as well as by reason of her profession, regards cleanliness and hygiene as among the foremost essentials of existence!

The brick-floored sitting-room struck pleasantly cool after a walk in the sun, but how grim it must be in winter with that "quaint" little window permitting only a miserly glimpse of sun and light! Grimmer still when you realised that the big tumble-down range, now neatly hidden by decorations, made a fire almost an impossibility.

I COULD tell you a lot more about that neatly kept little room, of the modest sink, the bed, the every moment that one was going to be suffocated or crushed.

I know that such cottages are not rare in England's green and pleasant land, that other women have to struggle against these odds. Yet you would think, wouldn't you, that a woman who holds happiness and sometimes the balance of life and death in her hands would be better equipped for her job than this?

You would think that any society or association would realise the necessity for providing better conditions for a woman upon whose ministrations the health and happiness of scores of people depended.

It is a grim and gruelling life, that of the District Nurse. It needs tact and experience, human sympathy and strength of character, strong physique and a high degree of medical skill. No woman whose physique and nerves are not at the highest pitch of perfection can hope to do the job well.

Even if, like her sister working in the hospitals, the responsibility she carries and the devotion she displays are rated as low in the scale of financial remuneration, common-sense alone demands that she should be reasonably well equipped for the work.

The pretty but inconvenient little cottages I have described is not an exception: it is typical of the difficulties against which women doing some of the most important work in the country are struggling every day.

OLYMPIA'S Women's Fair in November promises to bring a host of bright ideas. Among them are tableaux featuring the "Five Ages of Childhood," ideal pre-natal, maternity and post-natal clinics and a model bedroom for a confinement, complete with the cheap portable self-administered analgesia equipment, story of which was first told in "Reynolds." These are grand ideas, but I should feel much happier about their usefulness but for the decision of the present Government to cut social services. All the bright ideas of progressive and intelligent people must come up against that brick wall of stupidity.

Similarly, the exhibition will be notable for a wealth of electrical gadgets and improvements. Among them streamlined wash-tubs, midge electric cooker 20 1/2 inches high which will cook a meal for six people.

Again, magnificent—if only steps were being taken to bring cheap electricity within the scope of the average housewife.

ALMOST any dress material will make up well in this attractive slimming pattern.

HEAD

TWO NEW and becoming collars which illustrate the upward line characterizing most of the new styles. They show how new styles can be modified and adapted to suit individual types, and that it is possible to be smart without looking either like a Gibson Girl revival or as though you were going to have a bath.

I MET a friend last week whose appearance made me gasp. Instead of her "page boy" bob her hair was scooped untidily on the top of her head, where one or two recalcitrant clips and pins were trying to escape from a little mass of hair-ends which had been curls.

"But it's smart and up-to-date, don't you think?" she said, in answer to my surprised comment.

Well, frankly, it wasn't either. It suited neither the shape of her head nor her profile.

There are so many women who, when they read that new hats and new collars are "going up," scoop their hair on to the top of their heads, buy a hat with a crown meaning skywards, and think that they have achieved smartness.

But it's much more subtle than that. Stunt merchants apart, those who design the new styles have some idea of line and rhythm. Moreover, it is for you to adapt these styles to yourself.

It is not so much the height of the hat or hair-line that matters as the upward rhythm of the lines. I'm sorry if the word "rhythm" sounds high falutin', but to me it is the only one which expresses it.

But to make it quite clear I have chosen two new styles to show you what I mean.

The woman in the top picture has good but fairly large features. Soft waves and clustered curls at the back lend softness and balance the profile, but they still have that upward rhythm.

The girl in the lower picture has a short neck, so that she looks well with the hair taken off it, but the "scooped up" type of dressing would hide the shape of her very pretty head.

DOTTED VEIL

A chenille dotted veil tied over your head—from the back—given you a trim neck. It should be fine enough to let your hair style be seen plainly. If you haven't learnt the knack of that centre back coil yet, a finely crocheted net will get you through the growing pains.

PICNIC REFRESHERS

PICNIC weather is really here, a little in spite of all that cynics say about wasps and discomfort with your tea, the picnic is an excellent holiday institution if properly managed. It means relaxation and fresh air, both essentials for health.

Drinks are one of the main picnic problems. Be sure that your thermos flasks are clean and sweet. Wash in hot water in which a little common soda has been dissolved. Then rinse in clean hot, then cold water, and leave uncorked for a day to sweeten.

If you take tea, the milk should never be put into the tea but taken separately. Your tea will then never have that curious "shut-up" taste that it gets when put in the flask with the milk.

Cover the cork with greaseproof paper before replacing. It keeps the tea "from 'staling'" and prevents leaks. Never ram the cork home, as this may easily break the glass. Take the flask to pieces when you get home, clean and dry thoroughly everywhere before putting away. Then your flask will last for years and will never get musty or rusty.

CHEERY messages from Miss Rose Simpson, organising Secretary of the Co-operative Women's Guild, bring the welcome news that she is now on the way to convalescence.

Miss Simpson, who has been ill for several weeks, is still in hospital, but expects to be fit enough to go on a short holiday of convalescence in a few weeks. It is to be hoped that she will not let it be too short, for she has put in a very strenuous (and successful) first year in her new job, and needs a chance to recuperate for an energetic programme she has planned for the coming winter.

Good refreshers. In both cases make the tea fairly weak and strain well. For the mint tea, put several sprigs of fresh garden mint into the bottle and remove before serving. For the Russian tea add lemon and sugar if required.

If you have a refrigerator, ice them before putting into a flask. They will keep ice cold for hours.

Coffee is rather too much of a thirst-maker. Lemon barley is one of the very best thirst-quenchers. If you want to make it quickly, use the new powdered form of a good make such as Borwick's.

Another good drink can be made by using the juice from a tin of fruit with bottled soda water or lemonade.

SINGING IN THE RAIN

London's Remarkable Welcome To Premier Signal Of Relief
From Nervous Tension

London, Yesterday.
As a mark of their thankfulness for the avoidance of war, which two days ago appeared so inevitable and so imminent, the people of London gathered all afternoon wherever vantage points could be found to give Mr. Neville Chamberlain a welcome home such as has been rarely accorded to any British statesman.

The aeroplane in which he travelled from Munich landed at Heston airport at 5.40. As on his return a fortnight ago from his first visit to Herr Hitler at Berchtesgaden, immediately on landing he was handed an autograph letter from the King.

It had been brought by the Lord Chamberlain, Lord Clarendon.

Assembled at the aerodrome to meet him were Sir John Simon, Lord Halifax and others of his Cabinet colleagues, as well as the Lord Mayor of London, the Dominion High Commissioners and the Italian and French Ambassadors and the German Charge d'Affaires.

THE ANGLO-GERMAN DECLARATION

Despite a heavy shower of rain, which thinned the great crowd which had gathered, there were thunderous cheers for the Premier, who then read the declaration signed at Munich by the German Chancellor and himself.

"The German Fuehrer and Chancellor and the British Prime Minister have had a further meeting to-day, and are agreed in recognising that the question of Anglo-German relations is of first importance for the two countries and for Europe.

"We regard the agreement reached last night and the Anglo-German Naval Agreement as symbolic of the desire of our two peoples never to go to war with one another again.

"We are resolved that methods of consultation shall be the methods adopted to deal with any other question that may concern our two countries, and we are determined to continue our efforts to remove possible sources of difference and thus contribute to assuring the peace of Europe."

Mr. Chamberlain acknowledged the greetings of the crowd delightedly. He got into his car to drive direct to Buckingham Palace for an audience with the King, but before it had proceeded far the crowd broke the police cordon and brought the car to a standstill and surged round it cheering madly.

Eventually, after passing along a route thronged with cheering spectators, the Prime Minister arrived at 6.15 at the Palace, where Mr. Chamberlain and Mrs. Chamberlain were received by the King and Queen with whom they remained nearly half an hour.

In the meantime great crowds packed Downing Street and all kept their spirits in the downpour of rain by singing and shouting wartime songs and slogans.

ON BUCKINGHAM PALACE BALCONY

Returning from the Palace, the Prime Minister and his wife were met again by the cheers of the assembled people, and the car made a triumphal progress towards Downing Street.

Outside No. 10, Downing Street, on the Premier's arrival, scenes of wildest enthusiasm were enacted. The police were compelled to make repeated appeals to the crowds through loudspeakers to secure sufficient space for the passage of the Premier's car.

Before leaving for Downing Street, Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlain had appeared on the balcony at Buckingham Palace with the King and Queen in response to continuous requests of the massed people outside the Palace garden. The vast concourse gave vent to their emotion, pent up through long days and nights of haunting anxiety and alternating fear and hope.

Downing Street, which has been the scene of many memorable demonstrations, has rarely if ever witnessed a more poignant expression of the people's enthusiasm and gratitude for the action which has brought them peace and relief from the nervous tension that occurred when the Prime Minister came home.

His car advanced slowly through a tumult of cheers. As he stood in the doorway of Number 10, bowing, the crowd sang

Mr. Neville Chamberlain, at Heston. With him are the German Ambassador and Lord Halifax. (Copyright: By Air Mail).

BELGIUM BACK TO NORMAL

Brussels, Yesterday.

The first European Government to adopt measures for re-establishing normality in Belgium, whose Cabinet decided yesterday that, in view of the improvement in the international situation, the army should be again reduced to peace strength.

The Government also congratulated the Nation on the order and discipline with which the people performed additional duties.—Trans-Ocean.

"For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" and cheered again and again.

NATIONAL ANTHEM SUNG IN DOWNING STREET

When Mr. Chamberlain reappeared at a first floor window the cheering rose again to a roar of enthusiasm, but as he raised his hand for silence, it stilled itself in an instant.

Speaking with great emotion the Premier said: "My good friends. This is the second time in our history that there has come back from Germany to Downing Street, peace with honour." (cheers) When he was able to proceed he added: "I believe it is peace for our time." Cheers again broke out but later Mr. Chamberlain was able to continue, and he said: "Thank you from the bottom of our hearts for your welcome," to which the crowd replied: "We thank you."

Before dispersing the crowd sang the National Anthem.—British Wireless.

WOMEN'S AUXILIARY SCHEME TO BE CONTINUED

London, Yesterday.

The War Office states that although it was found necessary to announce a scheme for auxiliary territorial service for women during the recent emergency, this scheme had been in preparation for some time and will form a recognised service in future.

It will be run on the same lines as the Territorial Army in peacetime, but in event of war, the service will be paid and fulltime.

There has been a most enthusiastic response, which is greatly appreciated by the War Office and the Air Ministry, to the appeal for recruits for the auxiliary territorial service, and applicants who do not receive an answer for a few days are requested to be patient, as the clerical work in dealing with applications must inevitably take some time.—British Wireless.

TRIBUTES TO MR. CHAMBERLAIN

London, Yesterday.

Messages from other capitals describe tributes accorded by public men and public opinion to Mr. Chamberlain's great efforts for peace.

Resolutions of congratulations are flowing into Downing Street from public bodies of all kinds in all parts of the country and from the Overseas Empire.—British Wireless.

Men Patients Sleep On Hospital Floors

Serious Problem Created For Tung Wah

("Sunday Herald" Special)

Accommodation at the Tung Wah Hospital in Po Yan Street is so heavily taxed to-day that women-patients are forced to sleep two in a single bed, while male-patients occupy every available inch of space, sleeping on the floors of the different wards in the institution, between the beds and under them!

One hundred and thirteen women-patients were counted yesterday in two of the female wards in which there were only about 60 beds, while men were seen lying on straw mats, in between and under beds in the male wards.

TAKING AN AMBULANCE FOR A RIDE

("HERALD" SPECIAL)

BY A PRETEXT OF BEING ILL, DESTITUATES AND NEAR-DESTITUTES WHO LIVE BY THEIR WITS HAVE FOUND A NOVEL WAY OF SECURING FREE BOARD AND LODGINGS.

Lying in the street, writhing bodies and distorted faces as in pain, is the ingenious method which they have adopted, to "pave the way" into charitable hospitals such as the Tung Wah and Kwong Wah Hospitals.

This was revealed to the "Sunday Herald" yesterday by an official of the Tung Wah Hospital, who stated that many of these individuals after their discharge, have been brought back again a few days later, again in ambulance.

On seeing a man lying down holding his abdomen and twisting in "pain," a police constable invariably summons an ambulance to convey the "sick" man to hospital.

Wong Yiu Wan, who fell from a ladder, while at work in No. 29 Waterloo Road, was admitted to hospital with a broken leg.

When it comes to the widely used children's remedy—"milk of magnesia"—many doctors for over half a century have said "PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia" is the standard of the world. Safe for children. ### CORRESPONDENCE

THE GREAT BETRAYAL

Sir.—Herr Hitler may be described as the Corporal who went on fighting twenty years after the war had finished, and gained single-handed for Germany all that Charlemagne, Bismarck, and Hindenburg dreamed of, but failed to secure.

Amidst the plaudits of 97 million Germans, forty million Frenchmen, and the vast conglomeration of races that make up the British Empire, it may sound impertinent for one obscure person to enquire how the Corporal managed it.

Nevertheless, I do so, because in my simple-mindedness I have always understood that the British Empire stood for Truth, Justice and Freedom; three ideals that if I am to believe the past utterances of Mr. Chamberlain and the statesmen who preceded him, are as sharply opposed to the Hitlerian regime as an honest workman is to a thug.

But perhaps my conception of our national morality is old-fashioned, and that by some scientific process which I in my dotage have failed to understand, white has become black. If this indeed be so, and we are all Black-shirts together, then in fairness to the odd Democrat like myself, Mr. Chamberlain should put his shirt on.

In view of the tremendous ovation accorded Mr. Chamberlain by a grateful world, these remarks no doubt sound like base ingratitude, but I am encouraged to go on making them, because in their great relief, I feel that a very large proportion of the ovations have not stopped to digest the terms of the Munich agreement.

The plain facts, as they appear to me, are that instead of negotiating a "Peace with Honour" pact, Mr. Chamberlain has gone over to the East, and the East is a peace loving nation to engage in war with a ruthless enemy, the Prime Minister by a series of brilliant manoeuvres, has bulldozed the British Public into believing that a just solution has been found for the Sudeten problem.

If the published reports of the agreement are accurate, nothing could be further from the truth. With the exception of the rather theatrical gesture of ordering the German army to march into Czechoslovakia with arms at the easy instead of the traditional fixed bayonets of a conquering army, Herr Hitler has not deviated a jot from the Godenberg ultimatum which Mr. Chamberlain found distasteful, and the British Public refused to accept, three days earlier.

Indeed, Der Fuehrer has gained a great deal more than his original demands envisaged, for Mr. Chamberlain by failing to insist on Russian representation at the Munich Conference, has lifted the dream of German overlordship of Europe into the realm of practical politics. Soviet Russia, to-day, is diplomatically isolated, and it will not be long before the Nazis are nibbling at the Ukraine. After that, who knows? Perhaps Mr. Chamberlain will tell us.

JACK SPRAT.

CHINESE WED AT REGISTRY

Two Chinese weddings took place at the Registry yesterday morning, conducted by the Deputy Registrar, Mr. W. A. Jones.

The first was between Dr. Jose Chan Yan Doo, of No. 141, Lai-chi-kok Road, Kowloon, and Miss Li Wai-ling, of No. 8, Kennedy Road, Hong Kong, and the second between Mr. Chan Hom-kong, clerk, of No. 17, Connaught Road Central, and Miss Pang Sui-ha, of No. 4, Ching Lin Terrace, Kennedy Town.

The many friends of Mr. J. G. da Silva, father of J. F. da Silva, the local soccer referee, will regret to learn that he was admitted to the Queen Mary Hospital yesterday morning for observation and may have to undergo an operation.

It looks a little odd, presumably a result of the emergency for Air Raid Precautions gas mask drill to be held at the Empire Pool, Wembley. The chief instructor is demonstrating how gas masks should be worn to fair bathers. (Copyright, Fox).

CAPT. T. ADDIS MARTIN WED AT CATHEDRAL

One of the prettiest brides of the season was yesterday witnessed by the many friends of Lillian Constance Seale Robertson and Thomas Addis Martin, who were married at St. John's Cathedral at 3.15 p.m.

Several different and striking features were noticed at this wedding; noticeably the somewhat different idea of dressing the four little bridesmaids in four separate pastel hues. The effect was truly delightful, and provided a very lovely setting for the cream Chantilly lace gown worn by the bride.

Fashioned on very simple lines with a short train, the bride's dress was further enhanced with a tulle veil caught to her head by a bandeau of orange blossoms. Adorning her neck was a necklace of pearls, and on her wrist an exquisite wrist watch, both of which were presented to her by the bridegroom's parents. She carried a bouquet composed of pink gladioli and white heather arranged in a half moon shape, and was attended by Mrs. A. S. Adamson as matron-of-honour.

FOUR BRIDESMAIDS

The four bridesmaids were the Misses Mary Adamson, Susan Owen-Hughes, Gillian Johnstone and Faith McClatchie, who were dressed individually in organdy frocks of pink, blue, green and yellow. The halo of tiny rose-buds they wore on their heads was matched in the rosettes embroidered on their gowns. Each carried a Victorian pose of mixed blooms tied with ribbon streamers.

Acting as best man to the groom was Mr. J. A. D. Morrison, and the ushers were Mr. R. Macgregor and Mr. C. Burgess.

The ceremony was performed by the Reverend Dean A. C. S. Wilson, assisted by the Reverend K. Mackenzie Dow of the Union Church, and the bride was given in marriage by Mr. J. F. Macgregor.

HAILED TO H. Q.

Following the ceremony, the happy couple left the Cathedral under an archway of swords formed by brother officers of the H.K.V.D.C., and when seated in their bridal car, were drawn to Volunteer Headquarters by a special group of M.C.O.'s and men of the Corps 1st Battery of which the bridegroom is Battery Commander. The reception at Headquarters was well attended, and later the newlyweds left for Shek-O where the honeymoon is to be spent.

For her going away dress the bride chose an ensemble of powder blue and navy, with accessories to match.

Both the bride and groom are well known in the Colony. Mrs. Addis Martin (nee Lillian Constance Seale Robertson) being the elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Robertson of Windsor, England, and the grand daughter of the late Reverend John Robertson, LL.D. of Upton Park, Slough. Her brother, Mr. L. G. Robertson, was

NEW CHINESE PASSPORT WATCH

("HERALD" SPECIAL)

SPECIAL PRECAUTIONS ARE NOW BEING TAKEN BY THE CHINESE AUTHORITIES AGAINST THE ENTRY INTO CHINESE TERRITORY OF UNDESIRABLE FOREIGN NATIONALITY AND POSSIBLE FOREIGN "AGENTS."

Passports of foreigners, proceeding into the interior by rail via Canton, are to be examined at Shumchun, according to instructions from the Foreign Affairs Department.

The order came into force yesterday and officials were posted at the border at Shumchun. Formerly, passports were examined by officials who boarded the train after it had crossed into Chinese territory, while the train was travelling to Canton.

It is understood that all foreign Consulates in Canton have been informed of this new procedure.

THE WEATHER OF SEPTEMBER

The Director of the Royal Observatory in a report on the weather of September says:—

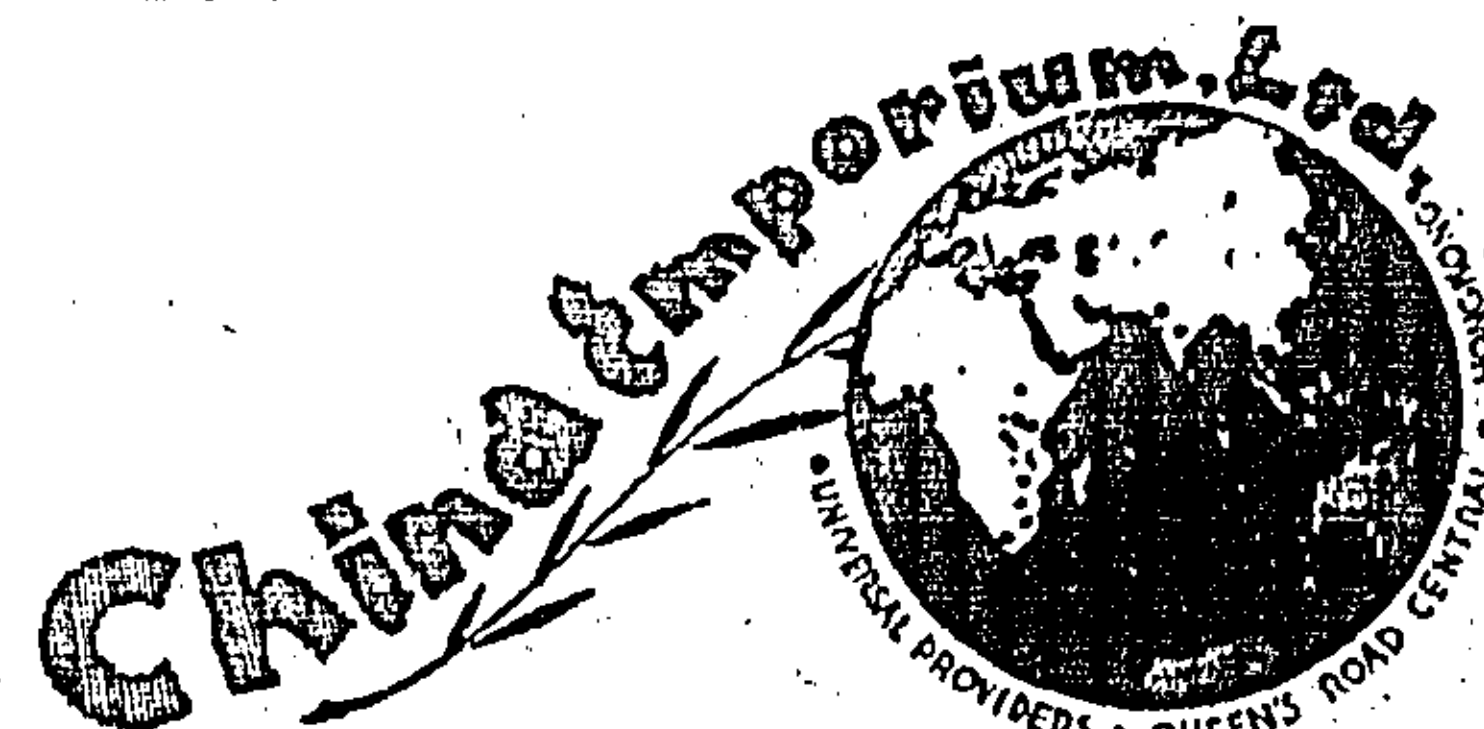

During the first three weeks of the month the temperature was slightly above normal, and the weather was mainly sunny with occasional rainy periods. An anticyclone became established over North China during the latter part of the month, and the N.E. monsoon set in for the first time on the 20th. Its arrival was accompanied by rain and thunder. Temperature subsequently fell, and from the 24th to the 27th the weather was comparatively cool and dry. Warmer weather was again experienced during the last three days of the month. No typhoon affected the Colony during September, and rainfall was deficient for the sixth successive month this year.

The mean temperature for the month was 81.6 deg. F., which is 1 deg. above normal. A maximum of 90.7 deg. was recorded on the 4th, 14th, and a minimum of 75.0 deg. on the

Drama

THIS photograph of Miss Constance Lum (Soo Chou Lai to your mind) accompanied by a modest little note informing us that she has sailed for America to fulfil a New York engagement, brings back memories of our first Oriental drama. That's going back some fifteen years—to a plush seat in the auditorium of a gilded palace on the Bow-oy, where amidst the congenial litter of pennants, Eokimo pie, and preserved Li Chi, we saw a Chinese film, subtitled in English. The picture stuck in our memory because it demonstrated that a man can't be too careful. The life story of a rich merchant who fell in love with a sing-song girl, the enraptured one to show the strength of his passion, makes the sing-song girl pull out one of his teeth with a pair of pliers. The next shot shows the merchant opening one of the drawers in her dressing table and finding it full of teeth. The close-up of teeth was a nice piece of realism, the drawer being chock-a-block with dentistry that ranged from single mountings to half plates, and full upper and lower sets.

We had the greatest difficulty in refraining from shouting "Yah"—a temptation that at least one member of the company gave way to in a series of hostile personalities, thinly disguised as criticism.

THE snobishness lay on our side, a fact that was not

LORIETT AND BARBAKO.

THE comparative failure of his efforts in the latter direction is no criterion of the man's ability or sincerity, but perhaps a condemnation of the Colony. Noted for their hide-bound reactions to civic problems, foreigners in Hong Kong are in general not the type who in England would be called intelligent. As is the case in most outposts of Empire, the all-important thing is not whether you have been to school, but whether your skin is the correct shade of white. S—loathed this attitude; fought it tooth and nail. Also he detested the talpan class whom he regarded as batten on and exploiting the poor Chinese.

Though he worked hard, and gave his all in time and money to ameliorate conditions which he considered to be revolting, S—confessed to us on the deck of the "Empress of Asia," that only his personal friends had made his stay in the Colony bearable.

"HONG KONG is a place I have loathed and hated more than other," he said, sadly. "Capitalism, Imperialism, exploitation of the coloured races, snob society, are all concentrated in their worst forms here. Frankly, I am relieved that the international situation makes it imperative that I should take my place in the ranks of the pacifists at home."

Sweeping criticisms which if you entirely disagree with, you can scarcely dismiss—for how many of us would surrender ten thousand a year for the right to express them?

Personalia

Miss Judith Smith, daughter of the Colonial Secretary, the Hon. Mr. N. L. Smith, left for England in the Carthage. Miss Smith will be married in England shortly to Lieut.-Comdr. C. R. Vernon Pugh.

Lieut.-Col. H. B. L. Dowbiggin returned to the Colony in the Carthage following a holiday in the North.

Mrs. D. F. Landale accompanied by her two children, left yesterday for the United Kingdom in the Carthage.

Mr. D. Lyon, of Messrs. Jardine, Matheson and Company, accompanied by Mrs. Lyon and infant, left for Home yesterday.

Windsor applauded with more than average ducal enthusiasm. Loret, Barpako et Gisela Antor are three dancers from Vienna with a brand new technique. Scheduled to open the season at the Gloucester this Sat, we watched them rehearse a couple of flying leaps the other morning. The school is neither ballet, moderne, classique, nor big apple, but a series of graceful bounds through the air. Loret who is petite, with hair all same Princess in German fairy tale, explained that a gentleman named Professor Harald Kreutzberg invented the idea, which is "very marvellous." They have some crackjack costumes, and one ensemble, a Red Indian outfit, can be calculated to raise whoopee in the most solemn breast. If you can stand two armistice nights in a week, turn up.

LITTLE NOTES of Great Importance

For the most amusing and delightful costume fantasy, direct your footsteps to HOLLY VARDEN'S. No where in town have we seen such a wealth of clever ideas for brightening up suits and dresses. You can wear a stunning bracelet of colourful porcelain flowers fastened to five strands of small black beads, and pin a clip to match on an unbecoming black frock. The effect will transform you from a Cinderella into a Hollywood glamour girl... honest! Or you can rouse the interest and admiration of your friends by slipping a miniature Tyrolean hat, fastened to a string, through the buttonhole of your new autumn suit. A good way to give you a reputation for thinking up clever fashion tricks. The hats come in three colours, brown, dark green and rust and are made in suede. For elegance and luxury try a synthetic diamond palm tree outlined in black, or choose a threesome of white Calla Lilies for dignity and restraint. But whatever you do, don't miss seeing these fascinating novelties.

Introduced to the world public in a major way by Zenith last year, the Zenith Arm Chair Radio model became an instant success. So this year, instead of a single arm chair style, you will find a generous selection of various charming models containing a choice of chassis at a wide range of prices. THE PETER MUSIC COMPANY have just received samples of these new models and are anxious to show them to you at the earliest possible opportunity. They would like to point out the remarkable convenience of these new models how you may have radio entertainment from far and wide without rising from your chair. They will be pleased to show you other types as well ranging from $67.50 up. The newest model's have from 5 to 9 tubes, and feature automatic tuning. You can arrange to purchase on the instalment plan here, and 30-32 Des Vaux Road is the address you want.

There's a new look about the "Advance" millinery models seen in LUCILLE'S. They're the kind of hats that men like to see the womenfolk wear, because every model has about it that smartly tailored air. Be it a tricorne or a tam-o-shanter, a feminine fedora or one with a high position crown, a feminine restraint governs the design. All these newcomers hail from New York and are just waiting to be shown the town. Handbags of exquisite trimness are yours to select as well, and we suggest you demand to see a Reymour genius that looks in every way like a camera case, but holds everything you require from comb to vanity case, but holds a batch of overgrown boys in suede or leather, carry a black suede bag, framed in filigreed gold and studded with pearls. Queen's Road, Central.

And now we would like to tell you a short story about the goodness of CARNATION MILK as a food for infants. Once upon a time, in one of the largest and best known hospital centers in the United States, an experiment was carried out to test the efficiency of CARNATION MILK in building strong and healthy children. All babies born in the hospital who were, for various reasons, deprived of mother's milk, were fed on formulas prepared from CARNATION MILK. There were 670 of these babies. Compared with this group was a group of 620 babies who were fed either exclusively on breast milk or on breast milk plus extra food prepared from bottled milk. The first group gained weight just as fast and in some instances faster than the second. CARNATION MILK stood the test! So now you see why we have so often urged the use of CARNATION MILK in your home. You may argue that you haven't got an infant, but if you have been following these weekly notations as conscientiously as you should, then you ought to know its many other uses by now. Your comrades will keep you well supplied... if you place an order with him to-day.

The last call has been sounded by VICKIE'S, and to-morrow will see the closing of their temporary premises on the top floor, Alexandra Building. In other words, to-morrow is your last opportunity to buy that frock you want so much at 20 to 30 % off original prices. The popularity of their dresses is seen in the sudden disappearance of nearly all our favourite styles... ones we brought to your attention a fortnight ago... just by no means all. Now we want to draw to your notice a two-piece black dress-suit which will enhance your smartness with amazing practicality. The wool skirt is attached to a satin blouse of black and white polka dots, so that when the model prompts you, you can dispense with the flattering bolero-jacket and go about dressed instead of suited. For the woman who adores those coat-dresses, there is a black and white tailored print, with boxy coat of black wool. Many others if you take the trouble to look.

Anyone with a picture problem should take it to the CAMERA EXCHANGE SERVICE, 1, Middle Road, Kowloon. Here expert advice is given free to all who seek it, and special attention is paid to developing and printing. It is really amazing what they can do to bring out the best in your negatives. You'll think it is due to your own cleverness, but we've seen them change a poor film into something nearly approaching a masterpiece. But that is only one of the many branches of their service. Another is to take in exchange a camera with which you are not satisfied, and provide one against which you will never have any complaint. Row upon row of new and second-hand cameras are stockpiled by them, and you can take your choice from any one. Whether new or second hand, every camera is in perfect working condition, and prices are lower than most. If you make this place your headquarters, we feel sure you'll never regret it.

At EXCELLA'S you will find something enthralling whether your budget is a bit strained or will permit a splurge. Queenly fashions may be discovered among their special group of taffeta and satin evening gowns... classics created to make you the most dated girl in town. Youth—fresh, buoyant and delightful is reflected in several modes styled after the Victorian manner. Aquamarine satin, with three vertical gores in the flounced skirt, and square-cut bust-length bodice is one to set your pulse a-throbbing. And you'll jolly well want to see a pastel blue model with elastic shirring on the bodice, and lapsels of the kind of black moire taffeta with velvet applique on skirt and bodice that we saw in this shop... and everyone fits as well as it looks. A good tailor on the premises for alterations, if needed, and prices are charmingly moderate. 188 Nathan Road.

Have you noticed with what irritating frequency children are apt to catch cold in all weathers? What's a mere cold after all, you say? A trifle, perhaps, but it is answerable for many illnesses. For instance, it induces or contributes to pneumonia, bronchitis, pulmonary tuberculosis, and several other maladies of a serious character. You see, a sudden chill impairs vitality and renders the victim susceptible to disease generally. Put that way it sounds a little more serious, doesn't it? So if we were you and had any kiddies to mind, we'd guard sedulously against colds by keeping a bottle of WATSON'S No. 35 Cough Syrup in the house. After all, an ounce of prevention is worth a ton of cure, you know, so if you've got 20 cents to spare, invest it in a bottle of WATSON'S No. 35 Cough Syrup for Children to-day... sorry, we mean to-morrow, when WATSON'S open for business in the usual way.

For your week-end tramping and walks round the golf course, LANE'S RAIFORDS offer a superb sports shoe that'll be full of your feet from early morn' 'til late afternoon... they're that smart and comfortable! No stiff toes—no hard backs—and flexible as an old felt hat. Your choice of tongue or laced models, in brown suede. These shoes are a product of Moxfield—made in England—and as an added touch of smartness to your feet, slip on a pair of wool or cotton socks, with or without fancy check or striped tops. Many attractive plaid designs are to be found in the "Vivella" family, while Morley's offer pure silk and lisle in several different plain shades. Penman's for cotton socks... and look out for those with Latex woven tops for that closer fit round the ankle. The Ladies Salon is the direction you take, and don't be afraid... their prices won't cause a ripple in the budget.

If you are one of those housewives who must rely upon the dealer's say-so when purchasing foodstuffs, take your custom to THE ASIA COMPANY in Des Vaux Road. Here is a firm that can be relied upon to supply you with only the best... the best of cuts, the best of imported fruits and vegetables, and the best of imported canned products. And when they offer "special bargains" you can be sure the goods are not the perishable last-thing-on-Saturday-night kind that must be disposed of for no good reason. They have a reputation to keep up—and they keep it up by giving you a good buy to help you to, and what, to our mind, is even more important, they don't shatter systems when they send out bills. For quality at less cost... remember these people. They serve you right!

We doff our hat to THE LINEN CHEST for turning out a handsome group of hand towels intended for the hope chest of a would-be bride. Selected from their group of Damask huckaback with three-tone coloured borders, these towels were shipped (by ferry) to their factory and returned in the twinkling of an eye looking like thoroughbreds with the monogramme of their future owner embroidered on their pretty faces. And another pat on the back for thinking of including the three-tone colours in the monogramme to match the border. We think the idea very, very distinctive indeed. The bride will have something to be proud of! Remember this clever shop if you want something original, because if you can't think of anything yourself, they'll do it for you. And do make a point this week of seeing their new crop of porcelain bowls. The designs are very old, and you can use one of the flat plate type for your hors d'oeuvres, and the bowl variety for bulbs. Very pleasantly inexpensive. 210 Gloucester Building.

If you must have your music just as you get it in a studio, concert hall or opera-house, give the Telefunken Super "Tosca" set a test. Its musical qualities are truly enchanting and the precision with which it will bring in and separate a multitude of far distant stations is a marvel of engineering skill. Radio waves from far away continents can reach your ear, and the sounds arrive almost unannouncedly true... just, in fact, as though you were sitting in a concert hall, open to its technical features, write, call, phone or wire... In get into touch with the VICTORIA RADIO SHOPPE, who are agents for Telefunken radio models in Hong Kong, Canton and Macao. They will be pleased to demonstrate other models, too, including the Aida and Carmen. Find them in Hankow Road, Kowloon.

HIS holidays were spent either at a great country house or some fashionable place. He had horses to ride, hounds to hunt with, servants who obeyed his slightest whim. He grew up into a tall, athletic youth, who rode fearlessly over the stiffest fences, and who, to the infinite satisfaction of his foster parents, conformed in every way to the upper-class attitude to life. Destined for the Navy, a defective vision cut short his career, in that service, and he entered Sandhurst and in due course received a commission in the Dragoons.

It was while he was serving with his regiment in India, that the nucleus of the present S—formed. Long, idle hours watching the men groom the troop horses, exploratory trips through the bazzars, the sharp contrast between princely magnificence and stark poverty in the crowded streets, germinated seeds of doubt. For the first time in his life, S—experienced a vague dissatisfaction with the existing order. He perceived that a vast, sprawling world that could never afford to go to a decent tailor or enter a decent restaurant, that never dressed for dinner, that was permanently impoverished, surrounded him.

It occurred to him that he lived in a glass house, a pleasant, beautiful, centrally-heated, all modern conveniences structure, but without doubt a glass house. Being a person of beautiful honesty, (When asked why he did not play polo, he horrified the regiment by explaining that he refused to use a horse like a cheap motor-cycle) he saw that it was sheer hypocrisy to chuck stones at your own residence, and forthwith handed in his resignation.

PAINED and bewildered by this sudden decision to throw up all that seemed worth while for the sake of what they by the even tenor of their lives could only regard as a passing madness, the parents by adoption of S—financially washed their hands of him. Returning to England, he obtained control of the small capital left him by his father, and commenced a series of journeys which embraced among others, a ride round England on horseback and hitch hike across America, and which came to a temporary halt in Hong Kong about a year ago.

HERE, he has busied himself in social work of various kinds, and as Secretary of the S.P.C. was instrumental in compiling and getting published a frank and illuminating report on the Hawker Squeeze. An ardent pacifist, as a disciple of the late Dick Sheppard, S—organized a pacifist group in Hong Kong sponsored by the Penco Pledge Union. Naturally the seed fell on stony ground, and we doubt if after several months of life, the membership numbers more than a handful of residents.

PROPAGANDA REACHES THE SCREEN

The History of
The Film

IT has been the frequent boast of Mr. Will Hays, the head of the American motion picture industry, that propaganda was kept off the screen. It was something of which he, and the film industry, had reason to be proud. What he meant was, of course, hidden propaganda, for certain propaganda films have been made but they have been openly labelled as such and no one objected. What is reprehensible is bias, propaganda disguised as entertainment, and unacknowledged. The claim that was hitherto made that the screen was kept clear of propaganda of this kind is no longer justified, for "Blockade" has been produced. This film was shown in Hong Kong last week. It is a film dealing with the Spanish war. It claims to be impartial, but it is not, for it is definitely partisan, and glorifies the Leftist side in the war.

There are two points in connection with this film with which I want to deal: First, the pretence that it is not propagandist; second, the quality of its propaganda. The claim is made on the screen, in the advertisements and in the press, that this film does not take sides, that it only condemns war, and that scrupulous care has been taken to avoid anything which would lead the participants portrayed in it to be identified with either side. In the Spanish Civil War. Now that is all my eye and Betty Martin. If anyone who has seen "Blockade" honestly believes that it is impartial, then he must have been living in a mental vacuum for the past two years. If the film had been produced on the moon or in some happy Ruritania where there are no newspapers then we might be able to accept it as having no reference to current political affairs, but as things are it is impossible to be convinced by any such pretension.

Let Us Be Honest

The film is described as dealing with events against "the background of the war in Spain," but the real background is not the war in Spain, but the war as described in the popular press. For the past two years we are accustomed to constant accounts in the papers representing those on one side as aggressors, waging war on civilians, killing babies, making women starve, and trying to conquer Spain by foreign help; and the other side as fighting for the defence of their country, caring only for freedom, inspired by principles of democracy and tolerance. It may be a fantastic contrast, but is it not the one that we have been asked to accept? Now comes a film depicting two sides in this same war, one represented as waging an unjustified war of aggression against a peaceful people, bombing their towns, shattering hospitals, killing children and fighting at the bidding of foreign intriguers; while the other is portrayed as made up of simple peasants fighting for their soil, and enduring terrible hardships in their fight for democracy and justice. Who could see a film of this kind and say that no one could possibly identify the combatants as representing one side or the other in the Civil War? And, when all the blame for war is thrown completely on one side, who could claim that when war is denounced at the end that it is a general denunciation and has no reference to the actual combat, or does not pretend to throw the blame on any particular side? During the whole course of the Spanish war there has been an unceasing campaign to represent General Franco as a baby-killer and his side as being mainly backed up by foreigners who are attacking the democratic rights of the Spanish people. It is far removed from the truth but it is the impression that is papers have tried to convey. And this film says all the same things, but mentions no names. And we are expected to believe that names are intended! Could anyone for a moment believe that such a pretence is true?

But, someone might object, when assurances are given that no comparison to reality is intended, should they not be accepted? It would be very convenient for propagandists if their word were accepted as easily as this. But who is it that gives these assurances? It is well to consider the actual film and its history. Those responsible for it are well known supporters of the Left in Hollywood, and they have openly appealed for help for "Loyalist" Spain: Clifford Odets, who is originally responsible for the puerile story; John Howard Lawson, author of the script, and well known as an author of strongly leftist, though not particularly brilliant, plays; Walter Wanger, producer. The director, William Dieterle, formerly a German actor, after a recent visit to Soviet Russia declared it to be his ambition to make a film of the life of Karl Marx, and that if he could not do it in Hollywood he would go to Russia to do it. It would be certainly rather surprising if an impartial film came out under such auspices.

BY FATHER RYAN

Some who have good memories in film history, recall that when the first news of "Blockade" was mooted in Hollywood there was no mention of an impartial film; it was to be a "Loyalist" film, and it was only after protests had been received that it was decided to make it a "peace" film — just as the very militant "League against War and Fascism" in America was re-named "League for Peace and Democracy." When the film made its first appearance, independent critics in such United States papers as The World Telegram, The Sun, The News, The Nation, not to speak of The Daily Worker, The New Masses and all the Red press, took it at its face value as leftist propaganda, and so it has been regarded ever since. Even, therefore, if the originators of this film were really strangely simple-minded men who never had the slightest intention to offend, yet the film is definitely recognized as a Leftist film. Those who have been loud in hailing it as such are the supporters of the Spanish "Loyalists" themselves. Throughout the United States and in England, Communists, Radicals, extremists of every kind have acclaimed it, and not as "propaganda for peace," but as a valuable adjunct to their propaganda. In Detroit, for instance, when the theatres did not wish to show it, the Leftists created such a clamour that it was exhibited. The film in itself is poor, a piece of childish melodrama with a threadbare plot, and as a box-office attraction it will very flat. But the Leftist organization have made a great bid to support it, for it is believed that if Hollywood finds that propaganda pays it will embark on it on a large scale.

United Artists, who are responsible for the film, and those who produced it were not at ease when they found that the picture was supported only by the Left, and was being exposed by the supporters of the Right as a piece of propaganda, so they began to issue statements and declarations. Needless to say these newspapers whose only idea of film criticism is to say ditto to their advertisers played their part in the campaign. It is the impression that is papers have tried to convey. And this film says all the same things, but mentions no names. And we are expected to believe that names are intended! Could anyone for a moment believe that such a pretence is true?

ridiculed the film for its pretence of impartiality. In the French version a statement preceded the showing of the picture declaring that it was "purely fiction and making no allusion to present events in Spain." Then the next thing that appeared on the screen was the description of the opening pastoral scene: "Spain in the Spring of 1936."

Dishonest Propaganda

When one finds such an atmosphere of dishonesty surrounding the film, one will not be surprised to find that the picture itself is dishonest. It is in fact contemptible in the measure of the dishonesty to which it descends. Let me cite just a few points. First, the origin of the war. It is represented as an invasion, an attack promoted by foreigners, while the "Loyalist" side is made up entirely of peasants, taken unaware. Everyone knows that in whatever way the war began it did not begin in this way, but it is a nice development of the common charge that the Nationalist army consists mainly of foreign "fascists."

Then take the air-raids. These form a prominent feature in the film, and on each occasion the sufferings of babies are given special prominence. This is quite in keeping with the idea put forward that the Nationalist forces are baby-killers, and the effect of the film is to stir up hate against the Nationalists for being guilty of such barbarity. Yet the film deals with the beginning of the war when the only air-raids that took place were carried out by the "Loyalists," who bombed open towns continuously until the Nationalists gained supremacy in the air. It was when the "Loyalists" found themselves unable to continue the war in the air that they began to avenge the inhumanity of it. Up to that, however, they had carried out 1215 raids on open towns, including twenty-four on Granada which in this previous film was depicted as being bombed by the "invaders."

Most revolting of all perhaps is the pretence in the film that those on the Loyalist side were friendly to religions and allowed people to practise it unmolested. A very elementary sense of decency would have excluded at least this mockery. In the film those who are fighting on the "Loyalist" side are shown wearing religious objects, and their supporters are constantly praying, though it is well known that in those early days of the war anyone that showed any respect for religion was savagely tortured and slaughtered wherever the "Loyalists" were in power. And now the supporters of the side that is responsible for the massacre of over 11,000 priests and the unspeakable treatment of thousands of nuns try to depict them as tolerant and even respectful of religion!

This is "Blockade," the picture which United Artists have tried so eagerly to explain away. It is a piece of thoroughly dishonest propaganda, made possible by the dishonest propaganda of a large section of the press from the beginning of the Spanish war, and the claim that it is merely "propaganda against war" is, sheer hypocrisy, on a par with the hypocrisy that carries on campaigns of hate under the cloak of organizing for peace.

IMPORTANT FACTS ABOUT FEVER

The reason why your stomach rejects solid foods when you have fever is because your wasted body tissues are crying out for moisture. This makes you desperately thirsty.

But very often your weakened stomach cannot retain even the ordinary fluid foods. Yet you must have nourishment to rebuild your exhausted body quickly.

Doctors find that Horlicks can not only be easily digested, but gives your body all the nourishment it needs in its weakened state. Horlicks quickly builds up strength to resist renewed attacks. It is invaluable during illness and convalescence, if taken regularly. Get Horlicks to-day.

In these difficult times of anxiety and worry, the task of carrying on and doing work which must be done is a doubly difficult one which must tend to exhaust one's nervous energy.

Horlicks builds up strength, vitality and prevents that listlessness and tiredness caused by constant nervous strain. H. M. Hodges, 406-408, Asia Life Building, Queen's Road, Hong Kong.

When Running Cold—Corrosive wear also takes place under these conditions. The New Shell Motor Oils, by combining permanent oil-film protection with instant circulation, provide a complete safeguard against corrosion from the very moment the engine starts.

Millionairess Plans

UTOPIA ON ROOF OF WORLD

Hundreds of miles from civilization, high in the Himalayan mountains on the borders of Tibet, Mrs. Clarence Gasque, a Woolworth millionairess, is looking for a spot to found a real-life Shangri-La, a utopia where there is eternal life and beauty.

Mrs. Gasque, with golden hair now graying, is a widow and a grandmother. She left England in January with six friends, members of the Mazdaznan association—an occult religious body.

For eight months she has been travelling in the mountains, looking for her dream spot which she hopes will be a haven of rest for the thousands of Mazdaznans throughout the world.

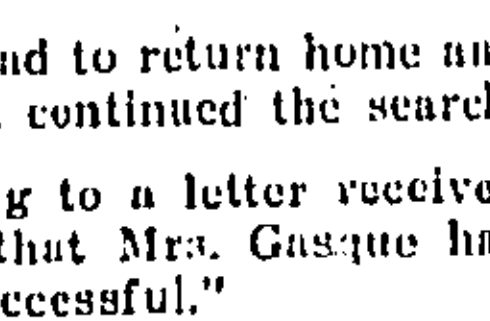

So far she has been unsuccessful.

Mr. Hastings Palmer, of Hampstead, who formerly lived in Tibet, who has just returned to England, says:

"It was my idea that Mrs. Gasque should search for such a dream place. I drew up an itinerary and accompanied Mrs. Gasque and her party as far as India.

"Then I had to return home and Mrs. Gasque continued the search.

"According to a letter received it appears that Mrs. Gasque has not been successful."

Mrs. Gasque

YOGISM

The valley for which Mrs. Gasque and her party were searching is said to be in the Himalayas about 70 miles north of an isolated hill station called Almora. It is called Rhanthek.

Mr. Palmer says: that the climate is like eternal spring with an abundance of fruit growing wild, and good soil.

Mrs. Gasque is the "Mother Superior" Gloria of the Mazdaznans. This movement was founded 50 years ago by Doctor Otoman Zar-Adhust Hahish. It teaches a form of yogism.

Mrs. Gasque was accompanied by two Swiss friends, and a Spanish film actress, Senorita Carlotta Hoff, an aristocratic refugee.

Mr. Clarence Gasque died in 1929 leaving unsettled property in England worth nearly £210,000; to his daughter Maymie he left the income from 30 per cent. of his Woolworth shares. For some years he was secretary and a director of F. W. Woolworth, and came to this country as English director.

A Shanghai Chinese, Chau Wai-shing, was charged before Mr. R. Edwards at the Central Magistracy yesterday morning for abetting a kidnapping. A sentence of four months' hard labour was passed.

Briton's Strange Romance MARRIED TO WOMAN HE HAD NEVER SEEN

London, Yesterday.

Although he had never set eyes on the woman before, a Briton in France now finds himself legally married to a refugee from Vienna!

This strange tangle has been caused by the activities of the "brokers" now reaping a rich harvest by providing "accommodation husbands" for European refugees.

But, strangers as they were when they met, the couple have decided that the "broker" concerned was inspired by Cupid, and they have expressed their intention of cementing the "accommodation" union with a religious ceremony.

Central figures in this romance are Harold John Pegler, manager of a group of sports-outfitter shops in Paris, and Fraulein Lea Jacobs, now Mrs. Pegler, under French law.

When she fled from Vienna, Fraulein Jacobs intended to set up home and open a business in England, but the British authorities refused her a permit.

Later she met one of the agents "outing" for the "accommodation marriage brokers," and she agreed to marry a man who was described as Harold John Pegler.

Actually, the "husband" was a member of the "marriage gang," using a passport which Mr. Pegler lost some time ago.

The "husband" was supposed to divorce Fraulein Jacobs after escorting her to England, but, instead of carrying out the agreement, he vanished after the ceremony, taking all his "bride's" ready cash with him.

How the woman and the Briton had been so strangely linked by proxy was not revealed until Pegler applied for renewal of his identity card in Paris.

He was challenged for failing to notify his "marriage" since the current card was issued, and when he denied the "marriage," he was shown proof of it in the official records.

COSTLY PROCEDURE

When husband and wife were confronted, the woman readily admitted that the man was certainly not the one she had "married."

The introduction thus strangely made was followed by further meetings between the two, who found they had so much in common that this strange "marriage" seemed to have been arranged by fate.

They have been advised that a declaration of nullity can only be obtained after costly legal procedure.

In the absence of a nullity decree the marriage is legal. To set all doubt at rest the couple have decided to go through a religious ceremony before taking up life together.

So far from bearing a grudge against the man who used the stolen passport, they look upon him as a benefactor, and the bride has withdrawn the complaint she made against him for theft of her money.

NEW OIL BED FOUND UNDER SEA

London, Yesterday.

What is believed to be the first submarine oil bed in the world has been found at Inverness, Nova Scotia.

Seeking new coal seams in a Government-operated colliery, a diamond crew came upon flowing oil one mile from the mainland and 2,200 ft. below the sea surface; created much excitement in Inverness, which has been depressed for years by poor coal markets.

Confirming the find, Dr. Alan Cameron, Provincial Deputy Minister of Mines, intimated that the drill hole would be carried deeper. According to geologists and engineers, he said, there were definite showings of oil, possibly petroleum.

This is the first discovery of flowing oil in Nova Scotia. Both at Inverness and Glace Bay colliery workings stretch several miles under the sea, but oil has never been reported before.

Threw Himself To Death In Grip Of War Fear

Crazed with fear of war, a young German last week rushed in his pyjamas to the roof garden of a block of luxury flats where he lived in London and flung himself to death.

He was Joachim Weinstock, twenty-five, of Grove Hall Court, St. John's-wood, N. W.

A friend told the "Daily Mirror":

"Jo had not a care in the world. He ran a business over here which, so far as I know, was prosperous. I'm sure he had no financial worries.

"KEPT TO HIMSELF"

"But Jo was just the sort of fellow to let this German crisis play on his mind."

"He was highly strung. And the thought of war certainly made him demented."

Weinstock had no relatives in Britain. His parents live in Hamburg.

He had been in England some years. The few folk who knew him—he kept very much to himself—were sure he had only one anxiety, war.

When police entered his flat they found the windows were not open at the bottom. This led them to believe Weinstock had gone to the roof garden.

A servant heard a crash and found him lying, badly hurt, behind the block.

He died in St. Mary's Hospital, Paddington.

The funeral of Prince Arthur of Connaught took place with full military honours at St. George's Chapel, Windsor, on September 16. Photo shows His Majesty the King in the procession. Following him are (left to right) the Earl of Macduff, the Prince's only son, the Duke of Kent, and, in top hat, Mr. Alexander Ramsay, son of Sir Alexander Ramsay the Prince's brother-in-law. # I GO BY AIR

When I looked, or at least I felt, like one of a group being taken to an early morning execution as our "auto-car" drove through the silent streets of Marseille at 4.30 a.m. The offices of the Air-France Co. had already opened at 4 and I don't think many of us had slept a wink that night before our flight. There had been tender good-byes and celebrations, adieu adieu adieu, but everyone had kept an eye on the clock!

We were taken to the village of Marignane on the gulf of Berre which, by a geographic injustice, has been called L'Etang de St. Remy. There we went through the unusual flying preliminaries, i.e. the weighing of passengers and luggage. Though my heart was heavy, I did not even weigh 50 kilos, a fact which drew a satisfied smile from the Air-France official. We were invited to a nearby restaurant, and a very elegant too, for our petit déjeuner, for the Air companies provide all your meals from the very moment they take charge of you. Soon our flock had been divided into "send offers" or "senders off" as grammar prefers it, and the actual passengers who stepped into the hydroplane on the stroke of 6 a.m.

A Smile
I remember a fair American youth shaking hands in real

French fashion and shouting "Bien des messages conviendront à votre famille" (Give proper messages and regards to your people). It was hard to refrain from smiling at the moment, but I could not help a remark about the expression later on: "Yes, Mr. Yankee explained, I learned French just by practice, I use unwarmed very rude expressions at times, when I do not talk like Mrs. Malaprop. Hence this pass word now, between my French brother-in-law and myself."

But let us go back to our sheep, —I mean my fellow passengers on the "Ville de Marseille." There were only 5 of us besides the pilot "master on board after God," his faithful mechanic, the wireless officer and the barman. As you see, we were not flying on full load, but the Air-France prefers to be on the safe side with regard to weight during monsoon time (when conditions are harder).

Great Thrill

If you look for a "kick" when travelling, I think nothing can give you a greater thrill than the moment your plane takes off, especially on your first experience. The propeller turns and turns with an impressive roar; for a while you don't know to what world you belong! Bump! now you are thrown forward with a jerk, you feel the tension of the pole jumper ready to fly over the obstacle, now you are soaring at last, feeling as light as air—the deed is done! roofs and trees begin to sink under you, you may look out of the window after protecting your ears with cottonwool, but do not try to stand up, for fear of accident—until you are thoroughly acclimatized.

A Traveller To Hong Kong From Marseilles By Air Provides Here A Vivid Impression Of All The Thrills Of The Journey

Now it was a good-bye to Marseilles and her suburbs, to Notre Dame de la Garde and Monte Cristo's Chateau d'If in the glow of the sunrise (for France, like England, was still under the regime of the summer hours). So it was really 5 a.m. when we started on our flight. How angry the Mediterranean "Mare Nostrum" looked under the blows of the mistral wind! What seasickness should have been our lot had we left Marseilles by boat!

Dozing Off

And now for a well deserved little doze in our Pullman armchair after the excitement of that last night on French soil. The noise of our 4 motors is silenced by a very up-to-date process, fortunately for our tired heads!

Suddenly the stout barman wakes us up with the warning "We shall be landing in fifteen minutes, Madam, gentlemen." I look at my watch: surely it cannot be Naples we have reached at 9 o'clock already. Ajaccio! shouts the barman, and I wonder if I am dreaming. Ajaccio!, Napoleon's birthplace by the ill-fated Elizabeth of Austria, Corsica, was surely not included in the programme, but the wind is favourable and we have time to alight for refuelling. My joy is irrepressible: what a beautiful hospice d'ecoute the company is offering us in addition to the "plats de resistance" Italy for lunch and Greece for dinner.

Nine Ridges

We fly over 9 ridges of mountains (I counted them on my fingers) some of them snow-patched. I recall the explorer Titayna's ironical remark "Tahiti is the only place where people still think that sailors have seen the world, because they have visited ports!" To fly over a country, over its hills and dales, even if you forget about inhabitants, is an experience never to be forgotten. (I wish all the Hong Kong school-children should be given this chance by the Hong Kong flying club some day.)

While the others went under a pergola to quench their thirst, I got permission to ride "en vitesse" to the three sites which boast of monuments to Napoleon. I had just time to beckon to the American archaeologist to follow me. On a square was the hero in Roman Emperor's toga, sculptured by Canova; on another he was surrounded by his 4 brothers. But the latest monument, which the screen had shown us inaugurated this summer with due pomp, stands on a hill commanding an impressive view on Ajaccio Bay, surrounded by century-old olive trees. The granite pedestal, 20 feet high, celebrates him in verse, adding to his praise the names of 20 victories. The bronze statue at the top is one and a half times life size.

"In a thousand years' time, remarked my wise escort, 'erosion' will have blurred out the names of all these victories, since the pedestal is on a slant." In a thousand years' time, thought I, historians may convince our children that Napoleon with his 12 generals was only a symbolic solar myth!

Famous Grotto

"Hurry up, we are all waiting", was the general cry as we reached the harbour. We showered our thanks on the "commandant" of the aerodrome who had allowed this adventure (The chauffeur had even taken us to the famous grotto where the child Bonaparte used to study and meditate). Well, it is an immense relief to know that a plane can wait a few minutes for you! "Les Sanguinaires", the "Bloody Rocks" showed their grimmest face as we flew over them, between Corsica and Sardinia, remembering the shipwrecks for which they are famous.

We missed the fragrance of the Corsican "maquis" or moors, a fragrance made of sage, rosemary thyme and lavender, which I had often enjoyed when sailing close to her coast; but what compensations! I was even allowed to sit in the cockpit for 5 minutes, and to watch the pilot steering in the air, master of space like winged Ganymede. I would have fain shouted "Sta, Viator, or rather STA, AVIATORI!", for Iachia and her cliffs were already under our wings, the Bay of Naples was beckoning to us, and soon the elation of the altitude would be over.

If "Safety first" is your slogan, you will never feel safer than in the open spaces that lead skyward, away from road collisions, careless motorists, lovers lurking in the dark, Chinese crossing your way to fool the evil spirits and all the dangers awaiting you as you drive in the street. "Can the pilot measure and regulate the altitude of his flight?" was a question I had often asked myself. I saw with my own eyes our height registered up to units, so that even soaring by the altimeter above the clouds we knew exactly where we stood.

How Funny

How steep the cliffs of Amalfi as seen on our afternoon flight, how entrancing the Bay of Sorrento whose very name evokes romanticism; how funny these bathers basking in the sun in regular little rows!

Now for afternoon tea (alternative with Samos wine) in beautiful Corfu—ancient Kerkira—displaying her stately olive trees from hill to beach. And here is the Achilleion, the marble palace built by the ill-fated Elizabeth of Austria and purchased later by Kaiser Bill. As for the modern black-eyed Junos who wait on us, they seem to me heavy of gait; it must be the fault of those wretched pebbles. Our last hop of the day takes us over the Gulf of Corinth and its canal, between the parched mountains of North Greece and her fertile southern vineyards. An hour's flight over Northern Greece explains the high percentage of Greek immigration: only a miracle of energy could transform these barren rocks into productive soil.

Near "Disaster!"

Lo! We are on the brink of giving in to air-sickness just as our hydroplane points her nose seawards at Megalopoli; (the great fir-tree) 20 miles from Athens. Saved in the nick of time from this "losing face". A triumphant dash over the waves, and a cordial reception at the next little customs' cabin looking more like a doll's house than an official place. "Welcome to the air-passengers!" says the porter, and we are given a booklet with useful information; it reads thus:

"You will be taken by private bus to St. Georges' Hotel, Athens. The local currency is the drachem."

Dinner is served on the roof-garden. There is a swimming-pool on the terrace.

Wine, beer and mineral waters are free of charge.

Order your "petit déjeuner" tonight, you will be awakened at 2.15 a.m.; you will depart for the airport at 3 a.m., and fly away at 3.30 a.m.

(Hm! this is the drawback of flying forwards the sun; I shall endeavour to fly westwards next time).

Nothing Equals 'ASPRO' for Dengue & Rheumatism

Sally's Estate,
Ingham, North Queensland.
Dear Sirs,
Having used your 'ASPRO' for Dengue Fever and Rheumatism, I have found that nothing equals 'ASPRO' for relief from pain.
I was very bad the last week in December, and couldn't sleep with Rheumatism in my legs. A neighbour called to see me and she told me that 'ASPRO' Tablets were good for pain. I straightaway sent to the chemist for a box of 'ASPRO', and I can truthfully say that I was surprised at the relief I got after taking the first two 'ASPRO' Tablets—they took away the pain and I could sleep at night. I took three Tablets a night for four nights, and they relieved me, and now I am as well as ever.
Yours faithfully,

'ASPRO' Works Wonders for Malaria

Gladstone, Queensland.
Gentlemen,
I think it is up to me to let you know how I have benefited by 'ASPRO'. Ever since 1913 I have been a sufferer from MALARIA FEVER, having contracted same in Rhodesia, German East Africa and the Straits Settlements.
I came to Australia from the latter country five years ago, and for the first two and a half years was continually in hospital in Victoria and New South Wales. On arriving in Queensland, a friend advised me to try 'ASPRO'. I did and it has worked wonders. I still continue to get slight attacks of Malaria, but I take a few 'ASPRO' Tablets and hot lemon water, and rest a few hours, I am quite O.K. again.
I wouldn't be without 'ASPRO' for anything and always carry a box about with me. I can thoroughly recommend them to anyone suffering from the same malady.
This testimonial is unaltered and you may make any use of it that you think fit.

GAMBLING'S SPREAD IN COLONY

THE statute books of most countries are littered with anti-gaming laws, whose varying degrees of ineffectiveness testify to the tenacity of the gambling instinct in human nature. Since that instinct cannot be eradicated, and since opinions differ so widely as to the extent to which gambling is an evil in itself and anti-social in its effect, Governments have mostly abandoned attempts to legislate and police it out of existence and have contented themselves with attacking its worst abuses and generally trying to keep it under control. Success, even within these limited aims has often depended less upon the rigour of the law than upon the state of public opinion. The most repressive enactments and the severest penalties are apt to fail, if their object is not endorsed by the community. The law, no matter how adroitly it be framed, becomes a dead letter if the will to apply it is lacking, through the absence of public support; and habitual disregard of one unpopular enactment tends to weaken respect for the law as a whole, as the United States found when it tried to enforce Prohibition. As with drinking, so with gaming laws: while the great majority of people see no harm in having a drink or making a bet, whether it be on the racecourse, on the throw of a dice, or privately between friends, drastic reforms are liable to defeat their own purpose.

No social problem is surrounded with more inconsistencies and illogicality than the regulation of gambling. With what logical force can it be argued that a practice which is right and proper within a racecourse grounds and from which Government benefits financially, becomes wrong and improper without. What is there to be said for the official view that lotteries (except by the consent of the Commissioner of Police) are socially injurious, that the organiser of a private raffle is subject to penalties, while there is no interference with the hawking without authority in offices and shops of lottery tickets of the Jockey Club. What from a social viewpoint is the greater harm, the dice-game houses so prevalent in the Colony just now, or the private gambling clubs for the wealthy and not-so-wealthy, under various descriptions, where sometimes thousands of dollars change hands in a single night? To cite these contradictions is by no means to argue that nothing should be done to control gambling because incongruities appear to be inseparable from regulation. On the contrary, gambling of the more dangerous type, socially, morally and from the viewpoint of health, has grown so alarmingly that a new effort is an obvious necessity. Very considerable powers are already possessed by the police, and raids on gaming-houses have recently been increasingly frequent; with results which have tended to show that for some reason they are insufficient to deal with an evil which the influx of refugees has intensified. Officialdom must also be inclined to view with disfavour the numerous mah-jong schools, which attract working-men to their all-night sessions and lower their efficiency (as witness, the bus-driver case recently), are repeatedly the scenes of fighting between winners and losers, and, too, often furnish the cloak of their own legality for illegal gaming in other parts of the same premises. There would be, we feel sure, public support for special legislation by Government, which has now appointed a small committee to study the problems involved and to recommend whether it can best be tackled by stricter enforcement of existing legislation, by heavier penalties, or by the acquisition of further powers to check gambling. It is not necessary to be opposed to an occasional flatter as a matter of principle to be justified in viewing with concern the steady spread of its worst manifestations in the Colony.

Europe's most alarming war scare for twenty years, ended dramatically at Munich in the early hours of Friday morning.

Following the signature of the Four-Power Agreement under which Britain, France, Germany and Italy agreed to surrender the Sudeten German areas of Czechoslovakia to the Greater Reich. How close Europe was to war only Herr Hitler could give an accurate answer. Nothing was farther from his mind than a desire to settle the Czech dispute by the employment of armed force, but in pursuance of his policy of blackmail by threat of force, he had taken up a position from which it was extremely difficult for him to recede and he may well have been caught within the trap of his own manufacture. So grave was the outlook on Wednesday that in Britain and France war was regarded as inevitable. The tide was turned when Mr. Chamberlain made a last appeal to Hitler and Mussolini, which was taken up with an alacrity suggesting that both Dictators breathed a very deep sigh of relief.

Following the high tension and anxiety, the immense reaction on a settlement being achieved at the eleventh hour, expressed itself in spontaneous demonstrations of thankfulness in all countries in Europe, with Mr. Chamberlain returning to London in the role of a national hero. From all over the world, tributes were paid to the Premier's tenacity and courage, Germany and Italy were jubilant, both at the victory gained in negotiations and at the escape from war. So great was this feeling of relief at the terror avoided that little attention was devoted to the precise terms of the agreement, and even M. Daladier had not yet been reminded yesterday that he had consented to terms, with a ten-day extension, which he had rejected on Tuesday as placing a stranglehold on Czechoslovakia.

The agreement was, in fact, declined to guarantee the remnant of Czechoslovakia until

THIS WEEK

The Hungarian and Polish accounts had been settled. All last week, we were hoping for the best while expecting the worst. That atmosphere has not yet been eradicated.

In China, the military situation deteriorated from Chiang Kai-shek's viewpoint. The Japanese concentrated all their energies on the capture of Tientsin, and thanks to their skill in manoeuvres, and a surprise landing above Wusueh, outflanking the famous fort. This redoubtable strong point was taken on Thursday. The battle raged for more than a week with casualties extremely heavy, but the Japanese may well view cost as well justified. The Chinese Command has a heavy task if it is to close the road to Hankow along the north bank of the Yangtze.

Virtues of such an agreement reached in the manner which the week's events have so dramatically unfolded are, perhaps, best tested by the future than by immediate analysis of the details and of the justice of it. Mr. Chamberlain has high hopes of a general appeasement. He believes that the personal consultation at Munich of Europe's four leading statesmen will remove hard feelings, clear the air generally, facilitate solution of other outstanding problems. Other observers won't say. They ask whether Herr Hitler's successful bluff will not encourage further exploitation of war threat tactics.

The League went a stage further in its career of surprise in its handling of the Sino-Japanese dispute. No attempt was made to repudiate the automatic application of the Sanctions Clause to Japan. Tokyo took the decision so seriously as to issue a warning. Will League Members now do something?

SCRUTATOR.

Battle Of Ideas: by Gerald Bullet

Were Adam And Eve Worth While?

NO one was ever made happy by money; but many have been cheated of happiness by the lack of money. The nicest people I know are those who have always enjoyed a reasonable degree of economic security. Poor men who become suddenly rich do not necessarily become better men; for poverty breeds fear and a sense of inferiority, and these two, which are the root of all evil, survive for a time the removal of their originating cause. But, let's face it: people who have been born and bred in an atmosphere of social ease and security are on the whole pleasanter people than the rest of us. They are more magnanimous, more civilised, better-mannered, better-looking. Security, not luxury, luxury enervates and, beyond a point, corrupts: we will make the moralists a present of that.

But security—by which I mean freedom from the daily nagging of economic anxiety—is a precondition of civilised living. Without it we must either lapse into semi-barbarism or become neurotic. A pre-requisite of the good life is a good income.

Put it another way. Fear is the root of all evil; and the sense of inferiority—from which proceed inordinate vanity, aggressive self-assertion, bellicosity, militarism, and all the hideous effects of an insane "nationalism"—is itself a form of fear. Let the fear be removed and the patient—unless he is too far gone—will recover. And at least one step towards removing the fear is to see that the wretched fellow has food, shelter, and scope for self-expression.

What is true of individuals is true, in the main, of nations; since a nation is an agglomeration of individuals. Incidentally, the very existence of nations—that is, of absolute and independent sovereignties—is now an anachronism and a nuisance. In a world of universal relatedness "independence" is a childish fiction.

Man has been in occupation of this planet for some little while now; and in view of the mess he has made of things it is almost more intelligent tenant.

As a joke he may have his points; in the realm of mechanical invention he has proved himself quite a little cleverer; but we are, as lord of creation, evolution's last word, he cannot be taken seriously. Was it worth all that Adam and Eve business? We imprison and torture each other for differences of opinion. We learn to fly only that we may the more easily destroy each other's women and children. We allow an amusing toy, the motor-car, to become a lethal instrument, so that there is less safety in the streets to-day than there was in the age of footpads and highwaymen.

In deference to a system we are too lazy to alter, and because we have made a religion of trade, we throw tons of wheat into the sea, while millions of men and women go hungry. There is no end to our apish tricks. (But why be rude to the ape?—a creature far less mischievous than his brother man.) And if the history of our race makes it difficult to believe in the doctrine of special creation, so our survival, in view of that history, makes it difficult to believe in any kind of personal God so far offered to us. For surely, whether from compassion or more impatience, God, if he had existed, would have rubbed us out long ago, seeing what incorrigible fools we are.

GERMANY SEEKING SPANISH RESTORATION?

Possible Outcome Of Munich Agreement

IMPROVED RELATIONS GENERALLY

Berlin, Yesterday.

Considerable improvement in Anglo-German trade relations, it is believed, will result from the Anglo-German pact.

It is anticipated that a declaration similar to that between Hitler and Mr. Chamberlain will be reached to-day between Germany and France.

German circles also hope that the Spanish Civil War problem will now be shortly settled. It is understood that this was the main topic discussed between Hitler and Mussolini when the latter arrived at Munich.

RESTORATION OF MONARCHY

Official circles would favour a settlement in which the Spaniards decide for themselves.

It is felt that the Spanish regime would be more secure if a monarch agreeable to the Spanish people could be found. Although Hitler stated that Germany had no more territorial claims in Europe, official circles expect that in due course friendly arrangements may be reached satisfying German interests in Memel and Danzig.

These, however, are regarded as insignificant in comparison with the prospects of a lasting agreement with Britain and the end of the antagonism between the democracies and the dictatorships.—Reuter.

Mr. Neville Chamberlain at Heston Airport after his historic flight to see Hitler. Photo shows a general view of the arrival.

DANGEROUS CLIFF PASSED

Paris, Yesterday.
Arriving at Le Bourget at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, M. Daladier over the radio made a short speech, as follows:

"I return from the Munich negotiations with the firm conviction that the agreements reached at Munich were indispensable for the maintenance of peace. It has now been saved. I feel that once this dangerous cliff having been passed, a general settlement of the Great European problems can be envisaged."—Trans-Ocean.

Premier On His Objective

MUNICH, YESTERDAY.

"MY TRUE AIM IS TO BRING ABOUT A STATE WHEREBY EUROPE WILL BE CAPABLE OF CONTINUING ITS WORK OF PEACE WITHOUT THE CONSTANT DANGER OF INTERNATIONAL CONFLICTS," DECLARED THE PREMIER, MR. CHAMBERLAIN, IN A SPECIAL INTERVIEW ACCORDING TO THE NATIONAL SOCIALIST ORGAN, "VOELKISCHER BEOBERACHTER" BEFORE DEPARTING FOR ENGLAND.

"I have never had my doubts about the fact that I had much more in mind as I devoted all my interest to the Sudeten German question," Mr. Chamberlain went on. "This problem had, as a matter of fact, arrived at an acute stage where it was extremely dangerous but I had the feeling that it was only the final obstacle in the path leading to greater things."

Essential condition for the future peaceful development in Europe is a better mutual understanding between Germany and England, he declared.

RECONCILIATION

"Our systems of Government are quite different," he stated, "and each of us is convinced that his is the best adopted to individual requirements. We must reconcile ourselves to the fact that each nation is entitled to its own type of government and I can see no reason why we should not be able to discuss in a friendly spirit affairs which concern both of us."

"I welcome the fact that this crisis has made possible personal contacts between statesmen who bear a great responsibility and has led to quiet discussions with the head of the German State and I believe that this contact thus established will be very valuable to the future relations between our two countries." — Trans-Ocean.

BRITISH LEGION DISCUSSION

London, Yesterday.
It was stated at headquarters of the British Legion that Major General Sir Frederick Maurice, President, and Major Featherstone Godley, National Chairman, had a conference with Sir John Simon and Lord Halifax yesterday afternoon when a discussion took place as to provisional arrangements in case the necessity arises of sending a British Legion contingent to Czechoslovakia.

Any decision on this matter must be postponed for a few days until the full import of the terms arranged at Munich are considered.—British Wireless.

A three-year-old child, Lam Sui-tai, of No. 117 Des Vaux Road Central, was admitted to the Queen Mary Hospital, yesterday suffering from severe head injuries after falling out of the window.

PRAGUE'S PROTEST AGAINST DURESS

ABANDONED AND LEFT ALONE

Prague, Yesterday.

Acceptance of the Munich agreement by the Prague Government was officially announced in a communique which reads as follows:

"The Prague Government met at noon yesterday under the chairmanship of the President of the Republic. Following the official report, the political and military situation which has developed since the agreement of the four powers in Munich, was carefully considered."

The decision arrived at during the conference was submitted to the Prague Government yesterday morning.

The Government studied this agreement in detail, taking into consideration all the circumstances involved in its final decision.

DECISION TO ACCEPT

Following thorough consideration and examination of all the urgent recommendations which had been submitted by the French and British Governments and in full realization of its historical responsibility, the Czech Government decided with an unanimous approval of the responsible factors and political parties to accept the Munich decision of the four Powers.

It did this conscious of the fact that the nation must be retained and that no other decision is possible at the present time.

The Prague Government submits to the world on this occasion its protest against the decision taken without its participation. Comments of any kind are entirely lacking in the Czech papers due to the strict orders of the censor department.

NATIONAL GRIEF

Concerts are cancelled and closed. The provincial towns have been asked to take similar steps to show the nation's profound grief.

The Premier, General Syrový, addressing the nation, compared the situation with the days of the Great War when he led the Czech national army from home. To-day as then the nation's life and future was at stake.

As a soldier and Premier, his thoughts must be devoted above all to the life of the nation.

The present hour was the most difficult one of his life since he would rather have died than to carry out the extremely painful task now confronting him. But as a man who had fought, he knew how a war must be won.

He then stressed that the Czech Government was compelled to surrender to overwhelmingly superior forces. The life of the Czech people must continue, however, and the mission of the Czechs must be fulfilled. He was fully aware of the grave responsibility resting upon him as a man who must fulfil his task.

SET ADRIFT

"We will enter a new life in the consciousness that we must found a strong national State."

This demand for the cession of territories is unprecedented in history. "We were abandoned and left alone."

The Premier then thanked the Czech people to bear his grief and disappointment with dignity.

"We are adrift in a ship at sea and everybody must help to bring the ship into the safe harbour of peace. The Premier concluded his address with the words:

"The Czech army will retain its task and with its help everything will be accomplished. People, have faith in the army!" — Trans-Ocean.

The Remedy That Has Definitely Mastered BAD CIRCULATION

Elasto

REGISTERED
The Wonder Tablet

For Blood, Veins, Arteries and Heart

IT is the function of the blood to carry health-preserving nourishment to the countless millions of living cells of which the body is composed. When it fails in this important function the cells break down and become diseased; and this condition will persist until the blood itself is revitalized. So-called "blood purifiers" are of no use in such conditions; impurities in the blood are merely incidental to the condition. The real trouble is that the blood has become chemically unbalanced; it is deficient in certain vital constituents, and drugging the system can never make good this deficiency.

Not a Drug, but a Vital Cell-Food!

Elasto, the new Biomedical Remedy, is not a drug, but a vital cell-food; it contains the missing blood-constituents in a highly potentized form, the only form in which the blood can take them up and use them. It is prepared in small, delicate tablets which dissolve instantly on the tongue, and it is absorbed directly into the blood through the tiny glands of the mouth and throat. Elasto does not enter the stomach; this is the reason for its effectiveness. Such ailments as varicose veins, swollen legs, phlebitis, skin disease, heart trouble, bad circulation, piles, rheumatism, hardened arteries and similar disabling conditions are directly traceable to degeneration of tissue-cells resulting from a deficiency of the vitalizing principles of the blood. No lasting improvement in these conditions is possible until the cause of the weakness has been removed, and this can be done only by making good the deficiency in the blood. Elasto, the Great Blood Revitaliser, does this with complete effectiveness, with results that often appear miraculous.

Healthy Blood—The Basis of all Healing!

IT is an indisputable fact that vigorously circulating, healthy blood, rich in vital properties, is the basis of life and health. It follows logically, therefore, that the revitalised blood and improved circulation, which quickly follow the use of Elasto, cannot fail to bring real and lasting benefit to every organ and tissue of the body. The far-reaching effects of a revitalised blood-stream can be truly amazing; hence the miracles of healing performed by means of blood-transfusion. Elasto is based upon the latest discoveries of curative, natural science. It is a pure, natural product, highly potentized, and is in complete harmony with the human system. Elasto contains no animal gland extracts.

ONE THING & ANOTHER

TAKING his life in his hands, and with a very precarious grip at that, Peter Snoop has journeyed through Central Europe these last few days to unravel for the readers of this page the tangled skein of lies woven about the Czechoslovakian situation.

In a graphic postcard he reveals that the Government of Czechoslovakia has been seized by the Communists. Drunk with power, they are refusing to listen to the humble pleas of Herr Henlein and Herr Hitler, because.

They want to plunge Europe into war.

They hate the present system of Government so much that they are determined to slap as many people as they can to save them from Capitalism.

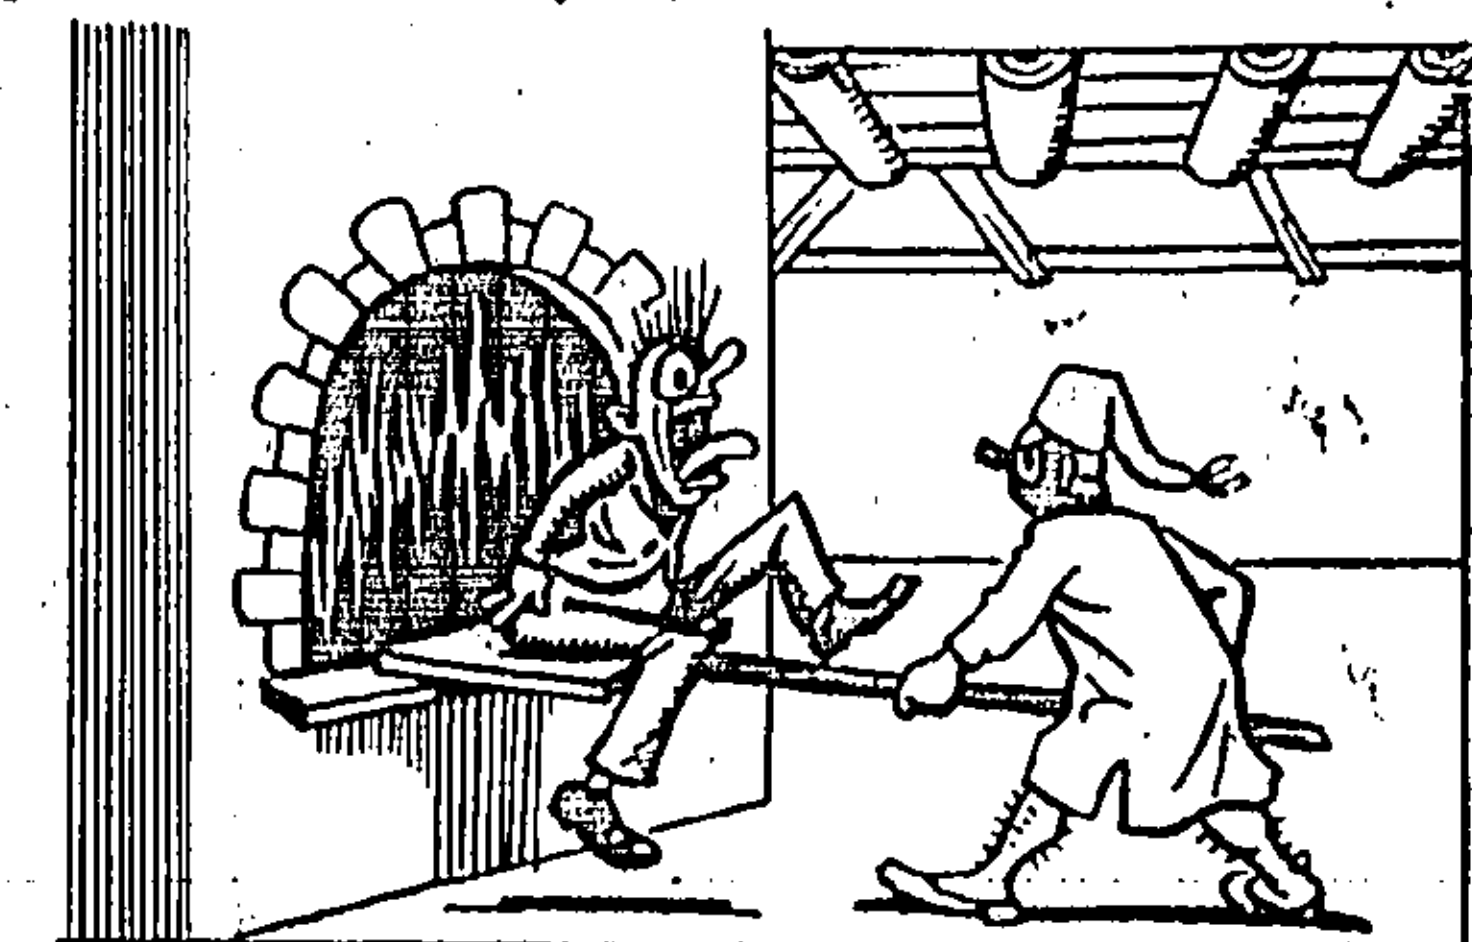

They are especially bitter against Germany. Being Communists, they are, of course, Jews, and they have become maddened with hate of Hitler because he has been compelled, in the interests of Germany's good name, to request the German Jews to decrease the number of their ritual murders.

Nothing of this has leaked out before, because every foreign newspaper correspondent who crosses the frontier, is immediately given a dose of Stalin's Truth Drug, which, of course, makes him write lies to his paper.

DEAR Mr. Whatist.—It may be a bit of a surprise to you, but I have given up drinking beer! Definitely! Irrevocably! I promised Mrs. Monster last night that I would never touch another drop, and it did my heart good to see the way the little woman's face lit up with joy.

And that reminds me. I haven't heard from you yet whether you are coming up to the Blue Pig for writes:—

HINTS ON ETIQUETTE

When visitors arrive unexpectedly at 2 a.m. your welcome should be warm, but the usual formalities can be dispensed with in these circumstances.

an evening. The invitation still holds good, although I have given up drinking beer.

The fact of the matter is, beer does not suit my stomach. And during the last fortnight I have been off for a holiday in France, and I have found much better things to drink.

That little holiday has done wonders in smoothing out all the little domestic troubles at home. What does it matter now if Mrs. Monster burns the bacon and eggs at breakfast? All I want is coffee and rolls.

So come up as soon as you can, and I'll stand a couple of bottles of champagne. Between ourselves, I swam home from Panna down the Seine, and avoided the Customs, and so was able to bring quite a lot of liquor home with me.

But don't let Mrs. Monster know about it. Although she is one of the best, she has got some very funny ideas on some things, and might make me pay the duty.

And with things as they are I don't know where the money would come from, what with Gorgon's piano lessons, and the Income Tax overdue and everything. I think Medusa—that's my older girl—will have to go out to work soon. I can't always keep her in idleness.

Yours sincerely,
The Loch Ness Monster.

THE moon is being re-mapped. I do not know why, as it seems a very unpleasant planet. There are, I read, dark spots on it that move about. One astronomer says they are swarms of insect life. Another says they are some form of fungus created by vapour or fog.

Why people should be interested in such a frightful place mystifies me, unless there is a scheme afoot for sending the unemployed there to colonise it.

MOST people think the moon is uninhabited. I am not sure; there are two theories. One is that it was once inhabited by a progressive and enlightened race. They got divided into two political philosophies, and each half said they must defend civilisation against the other. So they had a war, and their weapons were so progressive that they wiped each other out simultaneously.

The other theory is that it is still thickly populated, but as they are expecting a war to break out any minute, they are all living underground, and cannot be seen.

If a giant passes close to your car," says a newspaper, "and startles you by the sharpness of its 'zz-zz-zz,' take it as a warning. It is the authentic note of a potential bloodsucker."

But if you don't hear the "zz," you will receive another authentic note from the blood-sucker next day, printed in red and giving you seven days.

A FORECAST of next year's traffic regulations contains suggestion that pedestrians shall be compelled to go about chained together in gangs of not less than ten.

The idea is that if there are as many as ten, it is unlikely (100 to 8 against, the Ministry of Transport estimates) that they will all be absent-minded at the same moment.

Who told you all this, Mr. Whatist? Never you mind. All you need know is that Page Two is first with the news.

REFERRING to his record of 346 m.p.h., Captain Eyston are coming up to the Blue Pig for writes:—

I hear that they are now at work trying to find a method of making milk out of wool. Then there will be a controversy as to whether we should do without sheep and let cows give the wool, or do without cows and let sheep grow the milk. If the former, the Lord Chancellor will come off the woolsack and sit on a milk-can.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

An American doctor claims that we should be much better physically, mentally and—perhaps—morally, if we didn't eat so much. In fact the doctor maintains that a system of injecting vitamins, calories and proteins by means of a syringe is far better for our well-being than the usual method of eating and drinking. The learned doctor's very kind, Endeavouring to screen us, From indigestion's direst ills, With dinners intravenous.

'Tis far, far better in this way, This benefactor reckons, But even though he may be right A juicy steak still becomes. And what is more—I'm hanged if I Will let a few syringes Supplant the joys of drinking deep And long, on frequent binges. Despite the doctor's earnest pleas, I'm certain that no feed'll Appense me, when, for every course, They merely change the needle.

Both sausages and Irish stew Are firm in my affections And in my heart they have a place Denied to mere injections.

What's that supposed to be, Giles? That's you writing these paragraphs. Isn't it time you went home? I don't want to go home. Why not? Mum's at the pictures, and there

Dr. Lin Wo-ching Analyses The Legal Aspect of the Recent Japanese Attacks on Civil Aircraft

SINCE the emergence of aerodynamics from its experimental stage to the practical applications in the service of peace and war, two predominant ideas or policies have ever been maintained, which not infrequently resulted in conflicts. There is, or has been, on the one hand, the air-free doctrine; and, on the other hand, the doctrine of absolute sovereignty of the air. From the former doctrine international air transportation or commercial aviation is fostered and developed, with only such restraint put on it, as is consistent with the requirements of national security of the States over which the aircraft flies. From the latter doctrine, the extreme vigilance on the part of most national governments have found expressions. These take the forms, among other precautionary measures, the announcement of certain regions within their territorial waters as "prohibited areas," and the conclusion of international conventions or bilateral agreements, as the only basis for permission to fly over their territory, in time of peace. But, in time of war, the air frontier would be closed with the incidental interferences and interruptions of commercial aviation.

FREEDOM OF AIR

From the succinct observations above on the struggle between these conflicting doctrines, it becomes obvious that a complete triumph of either of these is not to be expected, at least, not at the present stage of our civilisation. To permit the freedom of the air to predominate, military interests must be sacrificed. While to let military interests override every consideration appals the end of international air transportation. During the World War the theory of the sovereignty of the air was asserted and accepted without question. The sky was reserved for warplanes. This is only natural, because in those days commercial aviation on an international scale was practically nonexistent. The first flight by aeroplane across the English Channel from Calais to Dover was made by Blériot as late as 1909; and this was the first successful international flight accomplished for the conquest of the air.

Commercial Aviation In Time Of War

C.I.N.A.

It was until peace had been restored that military aircraft were utilised for air transport, as it were, turning the swords into plough-shares, that international commercial aviation first saw the light. And it was for the purpose of promoting, maintaining and preserving this, the most wonderful of all gifts which mankind has ever received, from God—a commercial air transport—that the International Convention for Air Navigation, was concluded in Paris, in October 1919.

This convention, which is often cited for brevity as the C.I.N.A., succeeded in reconciling the conflicting doctrines mentioned above, when it acknowledged the principle of air-sovereignty and claimed, at the same time, the right of "innocent passage" for commercial aviation. The provisions of the C.I.N.A. to this effect are as follows:

Art. 1. "The contracting Parties recognise that every Power has complete and exclusive sovereignty over the air space above its territory. For the purpose of the present Convention the territory of a State shall be understood as including the national territory, both that of the Mother Country and of the colonies, and the territorial waters must be sacrificed. While to let

Art. 2. "Each contracting State undertakes in time of peace to accord freedom of innocent passage above its territory to the aircraft of the contracting States, provided that the conditions laid down in the present Convention are observed."

PUBLIC SAFETY

The Convention takes care of the military interests or public safety of the contracting States, by reserving for them the right to announce beforehand certain areas of their territory as prohibited areas, while providing some remedies for the civil aircraft which might find themselves innocently flying above such areas (see Articles 3 and 4).

The C.I.N.A. had been signed by twenty-nine of the allied and associated Powers (including the United States and China), and ratified by the governments of not less than twenty-nine States (including Japan). With such powerful and almost universal support, it must be always felt regrettable that opportunity had not been taken to conclude an international convention for the regulation of air warfare at the time. Perhaps, the nations, having been just relieved of the straits of a terrible war, were too jubilant in their celebration of peace to think of the possibility of another war in the near future, and to provide for such contingency. At any rate, some attempts were made to tackle this problem during the Washington Conference of 1922, with no more tangible result than the appointment of a Commission of Jurists who were requested to hold a conference at the Hague on some future date for the purpose of drawing up some air warfare rules.

HAGUE COMMISSION

About a year after the Washington Conference, this Commission sat at the Hague. Its duty had been clearly defined for it previously by a resolution adopted by the Washington Conference. It was expected to consider (1) whether existing rules of international law adequately covered "new methods of attack or defence resulting from the introduction or development since the Hague Conference of 1907, of new agencies of warfare;" and, if they did not, (2) "what changes in the existing rules" ought in consequence to be adopted as a part of the laws of nations. The Commission emerged out of this unprecedented work in the spring of 1923, with a draft convention of sixty-two articles. Although this was not ratified, it remains to-day the only set of codified rules for the regulation of aerial warfare. The nature and value of this convention may perhaps be better appreciated by the background sketched above.

MODUS VIVENDI

With the appearance of the Hague draft convention in the wake of Land warfare and Naval Warfare Rules, the circle of the Laws of War was completed at last. Unratified as the draft convention is, it will at least be regarded as a modus vivendi for contingencies, not yet provided by the existing rules; but, it will have the full force of law, where it merely re-states well-established rules and customs of international law applicable to air warfare. It is in this light that a judicious appraisal of the position of commercial aviation under the Laws of War, particularly under the Rules of Air Warfare, may be made without danger of distortion and mis-interpretation. The importance of the Hague draft convention is enhanced to-day by the fact that in the recent incident of the C.N.A.C. Kweilin, which was attacked on Aug. 23, the Japanese Authorities invoked the rules provided by this convention. Although in this case, the Japanese Authorities did not mention any particular article or articles in the convention, which they thought could be applied, a few of the articles which affect both the commercial aviation of belligerent and third Powers are reproduced as follows:

THE RULES

(1) The rules affecting belligerent private aircraft.

Art. 33. "Belligerent non-military aircraft, whether public or private, flying within the jurisdiction of their own State, are liable to be fired upon unless they make the nearest available landing on the approach of enemy military aircraft."

Art. 34. "Belligerent non-military aircraft, whether public or private, are liable to be fired upon, if they fly (1) within the jurisdiction of the enemy, or (2) in the immediate vicinity thereof and outside the jurisdiction of their own State; or (3) in the immediate vicinity of the military operations of the enemy by land or sea."

The purpose of this article is to sketch the conflicts, which once predominated, between those who strove to promote aviation as an instrument for international air communications, and those who

CHILD GAINS 3½ LBS. AFTER TUBERCULAR PERITONITIS!

All fathers and mothers whose little ones are too thin, run-down and ailing, can take comfort from this letter from an English headmistress. Her little boy had been seriously ill with tubercular Peritonitis, and although he made a good recovery, he simply couldn't seem to put on weight. Then his mother gave him a course of tablets containing the Fish-forming vitamins of Halibut Liver Oil (which is even better for children than Cod Liver Oil). "Then," says Mrs. M.A.J. of Notts, England, "he persisted for four or five weeks, and his appetite increased, he became happy and vigorous and gained 3½ lbs. in 3 weeks."

Glatabs work wonders for sickly children. For into each tiny tablet is concentrated all the nourishing Fish-forming, blood-enriching goodness of a whole dose of Halibut Liver Oil. And this is so full of body-building vitamins that one single, tiny drop is equal to a good spoonful of Cod Liver Oil.

Glatabs Brand Halibut Liver Oil Extract Tablets are sugar-coated and tasteless and children take them gladly. Even tiny babies can digest them quite easily with their ordinary tummy or stool. Get a bottle from your dispenser or drug-store. If you have any difficulty in obtaining them, write to: Banker & Co., P.O. Box 765, Hong Kong.

To Volunteer Or Not To Volunteer?

1897—New guard—old guard.

(Below)—

1897—Train as regulars, the Hong Kong Volunteer artillery.

These Are Days When Development of The Next Moment of Crisis And Emergency Cannot Easily Be Predicted. In This Colony It May Never Come. Then Again Who Knows What To-morrow May Not Bring Forth? Have You Made Yourself Ready. Here Are

SOME reasons why you should.

Everyone must at some time or other have asked himself the question as to whether or not he is justifying his existence. How many of us can honestly say "I am?" Now it is not suggested that joining the Volunteers is a complete justification for "being alive". It does, however, indicate an acceptance of responsibilities and an unselfish desire to serve one's country if necessary.

Some of us may feel that we are very small units in a very large world and that anything we can do is so unimportant that it is not worth worrying about. But what will happen if we all adopt this attitude?

The Hong Kong Volunteer Defence Corps has been in existence since 1862. It started as a battery of artillery and was known as the Hong Kong Volunteer Artillery. From that small beginning the Corps had developed into the existing force of all arms. The accompanying photo, published in 1897, gives some idea of the smart and soldier-like bearing of those early Volunteers.

To-day there are many vacancies in the Volunteers for British Recruits. There must be from 5.30 to 6.30 p.m., up to 40 attendances a year, a short camp and combined operations and to be on parade for the G.O.C.'s inspection—not so formidable a programme spread over the year?

In return for this sacrifice of time there is the satisfaction of a duty performed and of the knowledge that come what may you are ready to take your place in the defence of the Colony should the need ever arise. In addition, by joining the Volun-

many in the Colony eligible to join and who would do so if they realised how much their services would be appreciated. It is so easy to put off the question of joining with the thought "Oh I will join if anything happens and I am really wanted." This idea is due to a misconception of what is required of the volunteer, in an emergency. The Volunteers are first line troops, and must be ready to take their place on mobilisation side by side with the Regular Army.

Lt. Col. E. J. R. Mitchell, O.B.E., second-in-command.

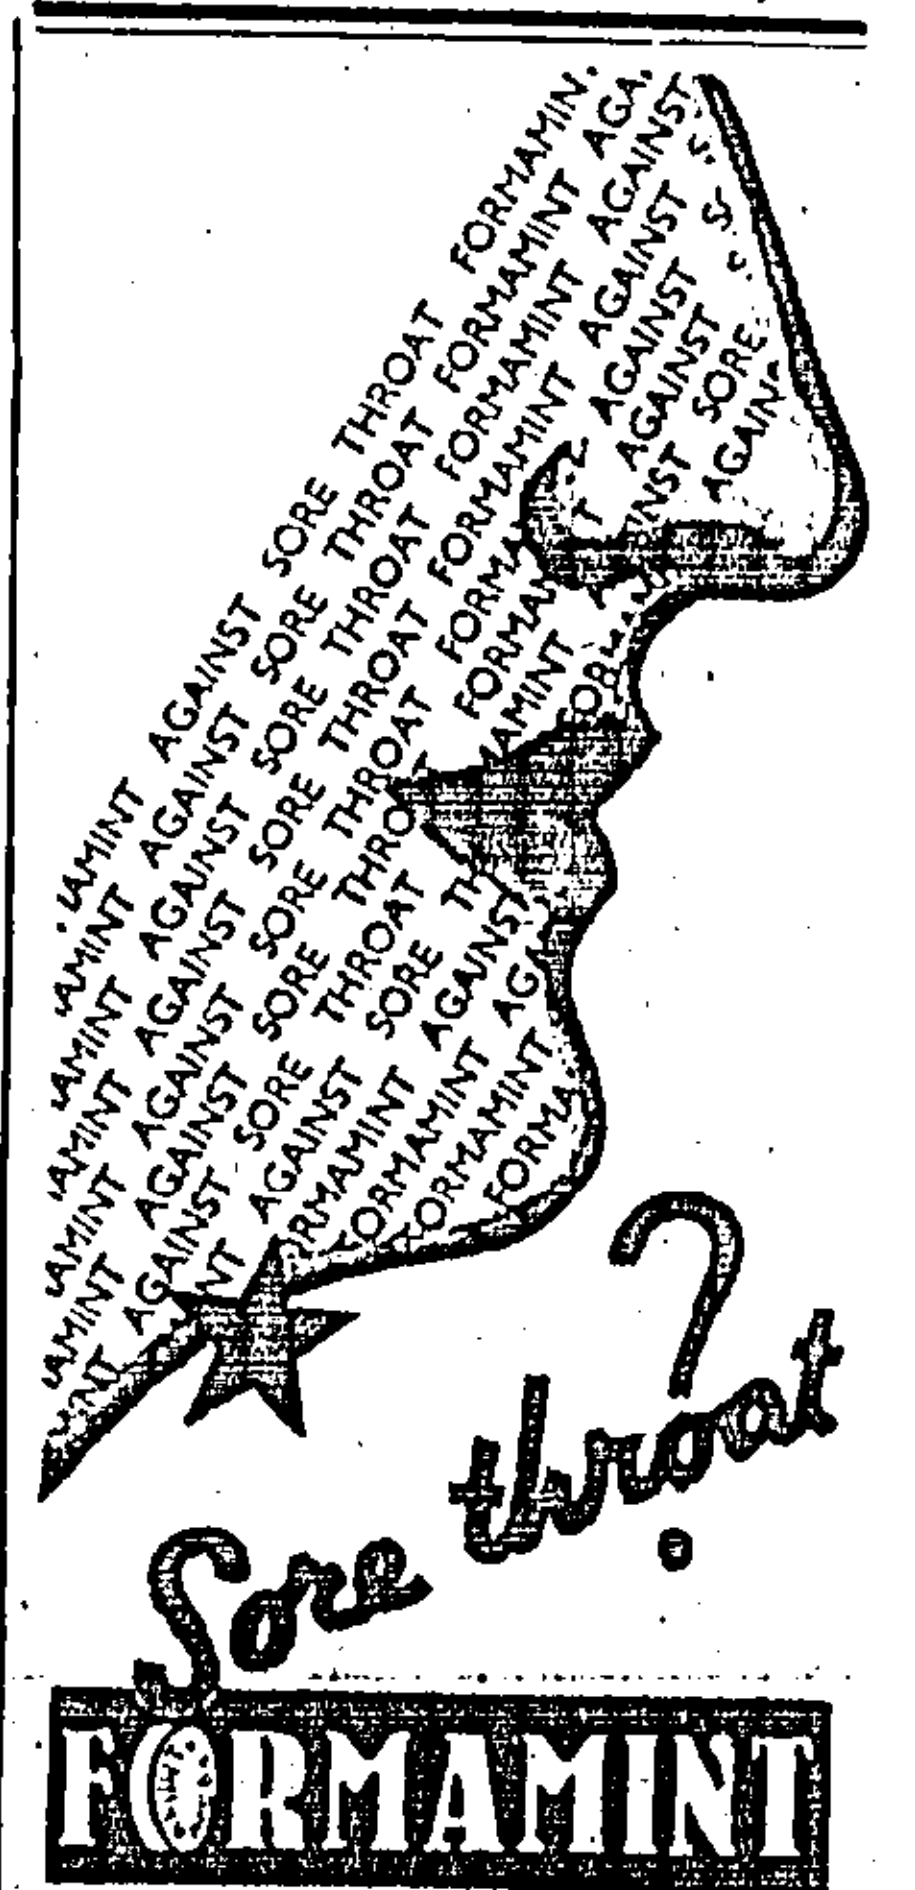

To carry out this role they must be trained and ready.

The Volunteers of to-day, like the Regular Army, are largely specialists. There are Engineers, Artillery who man both 6 in. and 4 in. guns, Machine Gunners both Mobile and Static, Armoured Cars, Despatch Riders, Anti-Aircraft Lewis Gunners and Medical, Pay and Railway Operating Sections. All these require systematic training in peace to be ready for war.

The training necessary is not arduous and not unduly heavy demands are made on the individual's spare time. Two parades a week of an hour each and shooting. Each unit has an annual dinner and the annual camp provides plenty of time, after work, for social activities.

As citizens of the British Empire we inherit many privileges—surely these privileges carry certain obligations and among them not the least is to be prepared to help defend that Empire should the necessity ever arise.

MAK WAI MING
SENTENCED TO NINE MONTHS'
HARD LABOUR

Mak Wai-ming, the well known local Chinese swimming champion, was yesterday morning sentenced to nine months' imprisonment by Mr. H. R. Butters at the Central Magistracy when he pleaded guilty to seven charges of theft of jewelry and money to the value of $9,540 from matsheds and cubicles at the Lido, Repulse Bay and Shek O.

Of the total amount stolen $7,670 has been recovered. Inspector Whant said that a camera stolen at Repulse Bay on May 23 led to the defendant's arrest.

The camera belonging to a University student was taken to Messrs. Schmidt for repairs by Leung who is charged with unlawful possession.

Leung was told to return for the camera after a few days and, in the meantime, the manager, who had previously been informed of the loss of this camera, communicated with the Police.

IMPLICATED BY LEUNG
Leung implicated Mak Wai-ming and as the result of enquiries, the further charges were preferred.

Among the complainants were Messrs. T. S. Cheung, I. M. Baxter, C. Renner, H. Sperling, Miss Y. Lee and four fathers from the Maryknoll mission.

The thefts were committed during week-ends. In one instance, he had been invited to join a party at Repulse Bay and in the absence of the other members, ransacked their hand bags and baskets.

In another instance, a ball was found in a tent from which several articles had been taken.

The biggest theft was that committed from Mr. I. M. Baxter, which included a diamond ring valued at $5,000, but a watch valued at $1,200 had not been recovered.

The other articles which had not been recovered comprised hand bags and other smaller things which had been thrown away.

Defendant told the Police that he had a motor cycle and had abandoned the articles at different places.

TO KEEP UP POSITION
Defendant, who was employed at the General Post Office at $35 a month, told the Police that he had resorted to theft in order to keep up the social position arising from his swimming abilities.

Defendant had given the Police every assistance. Most of the articles recovered were found in a safe deposit box rented from the Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank by defendant.

LEFT CONSTABLE
STANDING

At the Central Magistracy yesterday morning, a 23-year-old lorry driver, was charged before Mr. R. Edwards, for obstructing a police constable in the execution of his duty.

Inspector B. G. Baker said defendant was driving along Queen's Road East, when a spare tyre at the back of the car dropped off. Defendant stopped and sent a coolie to pick up the tyre. The constable on duty, went up to question defendant, who suddenly started the car and left him behind.

A fine of $40 was imposed.

TWO CRICKET TRIALS AND THREE FRIENDLY GAMES

FIVE cricket matches were played yesterday, two of them being intra-club trials, while Army and I.R.C. senior and junior eleven met on adjoining grounds at Sookunpoo and Diocesan Boys' School entertained a team captained by A. M. Prata.

Most remarkable result, which can be attributed partly to some excellent bowling on the part of C.Q.M.S. Paterson and partly to this period of the season, saw I.R.C. juniors dismissed for only 23 runs, highest scorer being A. H. Ismail with 7.

Broadbridge Bats Well In K.C.C. Trial

The batting of R. T. Broadbridge featured the second Kowloon Cricket Club Trial yesterday at K.C.C. Scoring freely all round the wicket, he gave a very promising display indeed.

Again no new talent came to light, but the chances of holding two very sound teams are extremely bright. McKenzie and Baxter both bowled well in spurs, while Gray has made great progress in his batting.

As matters now stand K.C.C. senior eleven is likely to comprise D. J. N. Anderson (acting captain), E. C. Fincher, E. F. Fincher, G. C. Burnett, N. A. E. Mackay, G. F. O'Brien, R. E. Lee, N. D. Lloyd, T. A. Madar, K. M. Simpson and W. L. McKenzie or R. T. Broadbridge.

E.M.L. SOARES IN GOOD FORM
A friendly intra-club match was played at Club de Recreo yesterday, when A. M. Rodrigues' XI drew with E. L. Soares' XI.

In scoring 47 out of 88, E. M. L. Soares, international nominee, hit a six and four boundaries in a sound innings and followed this up with 3 for 14. H. L. Ozorio did not meet with great success with the ball in his opening spell, but 4 wickets in 7 balls without conceding a run gave him a final analysis of 4 for 30.

Miss Li Betters 200 Metres Breast Stroke Record Time

Two new All-China swimming records were established and one equalled at Hong Kong Chinese Amateur Athletic Federation's annual swimming championships, which commenced yesterday afternoon at South China A.A. Pavilion with a programme of eight events.

Swimming conditions were excellent, the sea being extremely calm and with no current to trouble the entrants. Disappointment was felt at the non-appearance of Norman Lee, who was due to arrive back in the Colony from his South Seas tour last Friday morning, but it appears that he has not yet arrived in Hong Kong.

Chinese Y.M.C.A. quartette established a new All-China record for the 200 Metres free-style relay when they averaged 30 seconds per man, while Miss Li Po-ling swam a brilliant race in the Ladies' 200 Metres Breast-stroke to clock 3 mins. 33.45 secs. to establish a new All-China mark for the event.

Chun Wing-kai, holder of Colony's 50 Yards free-style championship, won the 50 Metres free-style event when he clocked 27.45 secs. to equal the All-China mark at present held by Chan Ki-chung, of Mak Ngah Association.

The outstanding upset yesterday was provided in the Men's 200 Metres breast-stroke championship, which was won by Ho Pun-kan, who failed to qualify for the recent Colony 100 Yards breast-stroke championship. Enrique Chan, the Colony champion, swam a very poorly judged race and gave the ultimate winner too much rope at the commencement. Ho Pun-kan led by about 15 metres when he reached his last turn and although Enrique Chan put up a great spurt, he was only able to take second place.

The following were the results of the championship events held yesterday:

Men's 50 Metres Free-style:
1. Chan Wing-kai (Independent). Time: 27.45 secs. (Equalled China record).
2. Chung Tse-ling (Chinese "Y"). Time: 28.25 secs. (Bettered Provincial record).
3. Tommy Kew (South China). Time: 30.25 secs.

Men's 200 Metres Breast-stroke:

Hockey Tournery Entries

The success of the Hong Kong Hockey Association's Tournament, formerly known as the United Hockey Tournament, seems assured judging from the entries received by the Hon. Secretary up till Friday last, the closing date of the series.

The Tournament, which will be controlled by the Association, will be run on "semi-league" lines, each team playing each other once and on dates and grounds arranged by the Committee.

The teams which have so far entered are:

ROYAL AIR FORCE
QUEEN'S COLLEGE
HONG KONG UNIVERSITY CLUB DE RECREIO
POLICE "A"
POLICE "B"
RADIO SPORTS CLUB
CENTRAL BRITISH ASSOCIATION
KOWLOON INDIAN TENNIS CLUB
NOMADS' HOCKEY CLUB

A meeting to arrange for fixtures and grounds will be held to-morrow evening in the West Lounge of European Y.M.C.A., when it is hoped that Secretaries of competing Clubs will make it their job to be present. There is no entrance fee, and umpires will be provided by the Association. The series will be held under the rules of the English Hockey Association.

"Y" LADIES' ANNUAL MEETING TO-MORROW

"Y" Ladies' Hockey Section will hold their annual meeting to-morrow evening in the West Lounge of European Y.M.C.A., commencing at 6 p.m.

C.B.A. JUNIORS' DEBUT NEXT WEDNESDAY

Central British Association will be running a junior hockey team for men this season in the hope of building up players for the future. The junior eleven will make its debut next Wednesday afternoon, at 6.15 p.m., against the Nomads, on the C.B.A. ground, commencing at 6.15 p.m.

R.A.F. TROUNCE "Y" 6 TO 1

European Y.M.C.A. hockey team were overwhelmed by 6 goals to 1 by Royal Air Force at King's Park yesterday afternoon.

The visiting team displayed better combination and were much faster in their attacks, which kept the Y's intermediate line busy throughout the match.

U. Kraus, "Y" centre-forward, scored the first goal of the match, R.A.F. replied almost immediately after with three goals in succession through Bartlett, centre-forward. After the interval Bartlett scored two further goals and Rossiter, inside-left, completed the tally.

TENPINS WINNERS

The competition for the highest score for tenpins during the month of September at Hong Kong Bowling Alleys concluded on Friday evening, and prizes were awarded the successful competitors yesterday morning by S. Liffers, Manager of Hong Kong Bowling Alleys.

Miss B. Harrison was presented with a Colonial Dames Set, donated by Messrs. A. S. Watson & Co., Ltd., for scoring 206 points among the lady competitors.

The gentlemen's prize, a silver cup also donated by Watson's, was awarded to Sapper R. H. Duddridge, who scored 252 points.

Senior Team Almost Selects Itself And Junior XI Possibilities

(By "REFEREE")

Contrary to earlier expectations, Central British Association Ladies will most probably be fielding two teams this season in the Ladies Hockey League as they have been considerably strengthened as the result of several newcomers joining their ranks.

Outstanding among these are the Booker sisters, Maureen and June, who should find their way into the senior team. Miss Joan Ewing, Miss J. Crawford and Miss E. Laitovetsky, also former members of Central British School first eleven, should also make their presence felt this season.

Central British Ladies should be able to field two fairly well-balanced teams and, with 25 players at their disposal, will probably constitute the biggest menace in the Caer Clark and Brown Cup divisions this season.

They have retained most of their senior players and will probably commence their season with a line-up something like this:

Miss D. Moss (goal); Miss B. Parsons (right-back) and Miss P. Everest (left-back); Miss J. Booker (right-half); Miss I. Woolley (centre-half) and Miss P. Whitley (left-half); Miss J. Ewing (right-wing); Miss M. Booker (inside-right); Mrs. G. A. White (centre-forward); Miss J. Woolley (inside-left) and Miss D. Hunt (outside-left).

In the past C.B.A. have always been a little weak in the full-back division and at left-half, but the above team should eliminate these weaknesses.

Last season C.B.A. fielded Miss P. Whitley at left-back, but with Miss P. Everest as a back, she should be moved up to the left-half position, where her speed is of infinitely more value to the team, while Miss Parsons and Miss Everest would form a solid full-back division.

Their intermediate line could not be better with Miss J. Booker at right-half, a position she has filled with distinction for C.B.S. these past three seasons. Miss Woolley, although she has always played as a left-half or left-back (Interport), should fill the pivotal berth, where her keen eye and strong hitting should prove a big asset to a much improved attack. Miss P. Whitley should fill the left-half position, while, as an alternative, the C.B.A. Ladies have an excellent spoiler in Miss E. Laitovetsky, who played in that position for C.B.S. "A" team. I think, however, that the latter should be made to play in the junior team this year, where her presence should greatly strengthen the defence.

Miss P. Bost filled the senior team's right-wing berth last season, but she has since left for England, and no better successor can be found than Miss J. Ewing, who filled the same berth for C.B.S. last season.

A problem that has to be solved before the commencement of the new season is that of the centre-forward. At the moment Mrs. G. A. White is available for this important position, one which she has filled for many a season. Miss Maureen Booker, however, is also an excellent leader, but perhaps it would be better if she played at inside-right for a start. If things do not pan out as well as expected, she could always be switched over to centre-forward and Mrs. White to inside-right.

I understand that Miss E. Woolley is available, in which case she should fill the inside-left position, unless one of the newcomers makes the team. The left-wing berth will in all probability again fall to the lot of Miss D. Hunt.

It will be seen that C.B.A. have a powerful team in the making and should offer a very strong challenge to "Y" Ladies, present holders of the Caer Clark Cup.

The make-up of the junior team is another proposition altogether. I understand that there are more defenders than there are forwards.

There are six players available for the five forward positions and of these Miss K. Winn (inside-right) and Miss E. Hunt (left-wing) are more or less assured of places. Miss N. Duckworth is reported to be a fairly good forward, and in the absence of Miss M. McAlpine, who I understand is not playing this season, should start at centre-forward while Mrs. B. Stoker, vice-captain of the Club, is certain to fill one of the remaining berths, preferably at inside-left, where her speed should prove to the team's advantage.

YACHTING WINS FOR JEAN AND LA CIGALE

Royal Hong Kong Yacht Club held their Opening Cruise yesterday afternoon with a race over a course of 8.6 miles.

GAMBLING

IT IS PROPOSED TO SET UP A COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE THE GAMBLING EVIL IN HONGKONG. IF THEY HAVE ANY SUCCESS

THEY WILL ALSO INVESTIGATE THE "MAHJONG PALACES" WHICH TECHNICALLY, ARE LEGAL. PROBABLY THE GAME WOULDN'T BE SO POPULAR,

LET'S HOPE THAT THE WORK WON'T INTERFERE WITH THEIR OWN RELAXATIONS -

-BUT IF THE COMMITTEE FEEL THE NEED OF ANY ENCOURAGEMENT -

THEY MIGHT TRY A BIT OF GAMBLING THEMSELVES!

MIDDLESEX BEAT LEAGUE SOCCER FAVOURITES BY ODD GOAL

MIDDLESEX DROP VALUABLE POINT IN SECOND DIVISION

ROYAL SCOTS HELD IN CHECK BY 10 MEN

MIDDLESEX, losers to Club last week, confounded the critics yesterday when they secured an odd goal win over South China "A," potential League champions, in a game of thrills at Caroline Hill. Their junior team, however, bowed to South China, also by the odd goal, thus early jeopardising their chances of retaining the championship.

Royal Scots, beaten last Sunday 10-0 by South China "A," failed to secure the better of Kowloon, who played the whole of the second half without Ulrich, and had to be content with a share of the spoils. Club, though securing an early advantage, also dropped a point, St. Joseph's sharing four goals.

KOWLOON 0 ROYAL SCOTS 5

Royal Scots proved too good for Kowloon at Chatham Road and ran out easy winners by five goals to nil. Kowloon's defence could not hold the Scots' forwards and had McDonald held the centre-forward berth for the Scots throughout, instead of only during the last 15 minutes, when he exchanged places with Callaghan, the Scots might have recorded double figures.

Salter was a very confident and sound goalkeeper for the Scots. Their defence, presented by Fowler and Barron, was also very steady, while the halves were too good for Kowloon's attack.

In the front line the two inside men, Fleming and McDonald, were noticeable for some very clever dribbling and distribution. Callaghan, in the centre, tried hard but his shots at goal were too often astray.

About midway through the first half the Scots opened their account through Gilroy, and Milroy netted the second with a hard drive. After the resumption the Scots dominated exchanges and scored through Blackrose (2) and McDonald.

S. CHINA 3 MIDDLESEX 2

Middlesex found South China a tough proposition at Caroline Hill and lost by the odd goal in five.

It was most encouraging to see the way in which the Chinese forwards covered ground, invariably making the ball do most of the work as they slung it about with little or no hesitancy from man to man. Middlesex, on the other hand, were too stereotyped in their methods, thus making the task of the South China halves and backs an easy one.

Chui Siew-long handled the ball cleanly in the South China goal, and others who were prominent were Leung Pak-yat, Yun Wan-hing, Look Tai-hang. The best Middlesex performers were Collier, Riches and Comer.

Chui Chung-yin, Chin Chi-fai and Tin Yung-fat found the net for South China, and Taylor and Slimmonds replied for Middlesex.

SECOND DIVISION

CLUB 0 ST. JOSEPH'S 4

In their Second Division match on the Club ground, St. Joseph's experienced very little difficulty in accounting for the Club by four clear goals.

From the commencement, the outcome was obvious, Club being very disorganised, and but for some resolute work by Keown and Taylor at full-back, and the coolness of Fleming in goal, the Saints would have scored as and when they pleased.

Ward proved an excellent leader, as evinced by his first-half hat-trick, while G. Singh and Rocha were very dangerous on the left.

St. Joseph's took things easily after the resumption, and Wilson, who had received support in the first half, went near the Club on one or two occasions. Saints again applied pressure during the last quarter and registered a fourth goal through G. Singh.

ENGINEERS 5 EASTERN 1

At Happy Valley, Engineers experienced little difficulty in taking both goals from Eastern by 5 goals to 1. The game was very one-sided and Eastern will have to improve immensely if they hope to hold their own in this division.

Sappers were best represented in attack, where all five forwards displayed fine combination to give the Chinese defence a gruelling afternoon's work. Denyer and Orton on the wings, displayed speed and centred with deadly accuracy, whilst Jones and Pelham were always ready in the centre to make the most of the wingers' good work. Marvin brought off a number of first class saves between the sticks, two most notable efforts being point-blank drives from Y. C. Keo.

In the intermediate line, Palmer caught the eye among a hard working trio, whilst Hodges and Fodor, although not up to their usual form, proved adequate for the ragged Eastern attack. For the Chinese, Yu Yun-sui kept a good goal and proved the greatest obstacle to the soldiers' attack. Tani Tsung-ngi was sound at full-back and Chen went in for the pick of a forward line that indulged in far too much individual play.

Sappers opened the scoring after 10 minutes play through Pelham and five minutes before the interval Lowe increased their lead.

On the resumption, Eastern reduced their arrears in the first minute through Keo. The revival, however, was short-lived as the soldiers took command of the game once more and went further ahead through Jones (1), and Orton.

WATSON HOLDS UP SOUTH CHINA LINE IN BRILLIANT STYLE

CHINESE WINGERS WELL BOTTLED UP

TRULY, local football form is difficult to understand, or weigh ## up! Last week-end, South China "A" recorded double-## figures to thrash the Royal Scots, whereas Middlesex lost to the ## Club, results which made the Caroline Hill team firm favourites

for yesterday's match, but things did not work out as anticipated

odd goal in three!

It was a tense encounter packed with thrills and, in the closing ## stages in particular, excitement ran high as the Chinese team ## crowded on the pressure in an endeavour to save at least a point.

Having twice led the home team, Middlesex were not to be denied ## and wholehearted efforts by the entire team staved off the Chinese

attack and they finished up worthy winners of a rousing ## struggle.

True, their victory was no easy

thing as there was little to choose ## between either team, whilst they were ## also blessed with a fair share of goal

fortune—one of Lau Tzu-man struck

the crossbar with a rasping shot that ## rebounded into play after beating

Jackson all ends up, and on two other ## occasions the Middlesex backs booted

off the goal-line.

Fung King-cheong also failed ## to register on the penalty-spot,

but this was not so much hard ## luck for South China, as Fung's

failure was due to a magnificent ## save on the part of Jackson, the ## Middlesex custodian.

Still, there it was, South China

only netted once against the soldiers

twice, and, after all, goals are what ## count and decide the points.

SOUND DEFINITION

For this victory, Middlesex have ## mainly to thank a resolute defence.

Watson once again demon-

of the best, if not the best, de-

Colony football.

His splendid all-round performance

was given full support by Sheehan,

the left-back improving considerably

on his recent showings, and between ## the sticks the soldiers had a safe

custodian in Jackson.

Whilst this trio took the limelight

the remainder of the side were not

The Third Division soccer encounter between South China and A.S.A., scheduled to take place on the Prince Edward Road ground yesterday, was not played owing to the non-appearance of the referee.

"Play The Game" Appeal To Football Players

In view of the appeal made recently by the Hong Kong Football Association for the co-operation of players and officials for the purpose of eliminating ungentlemanly conduct on the field of play, and to see that the game is played in the proper spirit, the following by Mr. W. Pickford, president of the English Football Association might assist greatly to that end.

"Association football is an exciting game. The rapid movement, the rush and thrill, the fluctuations of fortune, the burning desire to win and almost greater determination not to lose, make young blood course vigorously and even flutter the hearts of those who, no longer of playing age, may be content with the role of lookers-on.

"On the eve of last football season I made some public comments identifying several directions in which players could help in maintaining that character, somewhat difficult to put into exact words, which we British have the credit for possessing, viz., a strong sense of 'fair play'.

"There are a number of you ready and eager to start the season, full of hope and courage, and you all know what 'fair play' means. Football should be a game of skill.

"Yet sometimes we see players, in their excitement no doubt, for they would not do this if they had time to think, stop the ball with their hand or arm, or hold or push an opponent. As you love the old game, don't offend by doing this.

"Then there are more serious offences due no doubt to excitement and loss of temper. Among these are kicking, striking and jumping at an

SHORT STORY

ELEPHANTS MUST TRY

THE Sittang was in flood. Day after day the yellow current licked higher on the pile foundations of the riverside villages and bit deeper into the crumbling banks. Day after day the huge teak logs, three parts awash, nosed their way towards the sea like migratory dragons of the prime. The rafting contractors had been caught napping, and a year's out-turn from the forests was running wild. Desperate men drove weary elephants and foundered buffaloes to exhaustion, and still the river rose.

Just above the village of Shweg-yaung, where the river narrows at the entrance to a wide lagoon, a log-jam had formed. Po Toke, a grizzled drift collector, old in rivercraft, put it down to a Yay-sin, the miniature elephant which lurks in deep water and drags all terrestrial creatures to destruction.

But, whatever the cause, many hundreds of the great grey logs had baulked at the narrows and lay piled across the stream in solid confusion. Each hour was contributing massive reinforcement to the barrier and a vicious head of water began to accumulate behind the impromptu dam.

The danger of a disastrous flood, the fear that a delay in the breaking of the jam might result in a heavy loss of logs, the hope that an early break might enable the next bend made such a break imperative. But how?

The local staff of the timber corporation which owned the logs were working like beavers. A European assistant, at grave risk of his life, had planted charges of dynamite in the face of the jam. A few splintered timbers floated down through the clearing smoke, but the barriers held.

The forest manager ventured into the lagoon in a crazy dug-out and took soundings. "Sixteen feet where the bank shelves, Cranston," he said to his assistant. "But the elephants must try it. It's our only chance."

So, an hour later, when the sun was low enough for their taste, elephants arrived, sixteen of them. These were no travellers, no tyros of the pack-saddle and hauling chain, no puny specimens of the circus ring, but seasoned campaigners, nine and ten feet at the shoulder, with an average of twenty years experience in the timber game. The heavy metal rings on their tusks were worn smooth in the company's service, and their judgment of weight and balance was a thing without price. They were footsore and dusty, and dry, and the water looked inviting. The leader, trunk asswag, limped ponderously to the water's edge, tested the surface with his trunk and recoiled with a startled squeal. The driver piled his heavy load in vain, each thrust being answered by a snort of defiance.

For some reason, known only to himself, the tusk was nervous. Elephant after elephant was goaded and cajoled to the brink, with the same result. The forest manager blasphemed, the native drivers sulked and made excuses, but the villagers muttered mysteriously of the Yay-sin and of the wisdom of elephant-folk.

The Forest Conservator of the district made his appearance on a jaded pony. The great man was worried, for the revenue of the province is largely dependent upon timber royalties. He shook his head over the forest manager's report. "Thirty-five thousand logs, you say, Williams? It's a bad look-out. Why don't you send for Koh-pan-gyi? He's in a rest camp at Pymmana, not forty miles from here."

"He's a killer, sir, and I can't afford to lose a man or an elephant just now. Besides, I doubt if even he could break up this jam. There's sixteen feet of water all along the face."

"Well, it's your pigeon, Williams," said the Conservator, "but, if I were you, I'd take the chance." He wheeled his pony and trotted back to camp.

Koh-pan-gyi, killer and mischief-maker, the pride and terror of the district, weight-lifter and jam-breaker extraordinary, seemed that evening to bellow his reputation. He lolled against a favourite rubbing-tree in blasé contentment, his trunk appearing scarcely equal to the task of conveying to his mouth the daintiest pinches of tamarind seed and salted rice.

He had not fought for nearly six weeks, his present leg-iron were almost a month old, and it was fully six months since Ba Thein the Karen had succeeded to the seat of Ragu, the Indian driver whom Koh-pan-gyi, in a whimsical moment, had crushed to pulp.

The elephant stood a full eleven feet at the shoulder, a tusk in the prime of life. His slate grey flanks bore the scars of a mis-spent youth, one tusk was broken short to within some two feet of the socket, and his massive trunk and cheek bore the deep scores of a tiger's claws. On the company's books his value stood at fifteen thousand rupees, but his uncanny ability to handle awkwardly balanced timber and his unerring instinct for the key-log of a complex tangle rendered him priceless.

By

To Ba Thein and the gruscutters who attended him, Koh-pan-gyi was a god. A god moreover who had exacted human sacrifices on at least four occasions. Sooner or later his driver was doomed to a sudden and violent end, for the elephant was treacherous as the sea, capricious as the wind. But sufficient unto the day were the honour and the salary to be won in his service.

Williams had bowed to the inevitable and, in response to the forest manager's summons, Ba Thein and his charge were early astride. At an unhurrying lope Koh-pan-gyi covered 40 jungle miles between daybreak and an elephant's "nooning," the longest lunch interval in the world, from nine o'clock until four.

By nine they found themselves on the outskirts of Shwegyaung where the elephant coursed the Conservator of Forests for six furlongs, engulfed, as an appetiser, the contents of the village priest's begging bowl, demanded bamboo shoots, breakfasted and relapsed into slumber.

While my lord slept, Ba Thein reconnoitred the position. He was inwardly appalled by the appearance of the jam, which had deepened alarmingly overnight, but his words, in the villagers' hearing, were brazen.

"Fool! Would ye tickle a giant with straws? Koh-pan-gyi had scattered such trash in sport ere he shed his milch tusk."

On old Po Toke and his Yay-sin theory Ba Thein poured withering contempt. "I too have seen such bogies, 'father,' he said. "In a bottle, on pay day." In this intolerance he was probably sincere for, like many of his tribe, he was a Christian and despised the spirit-worship of a simpler folk.

It was a man of a very different temper who, an hour later, interviewed Williams at the latter's temporary headquarters. Gone were the jaunty air and the boastful speech, as, with tears in his eyes, he prayed the forest manager, to spare his elephant from the ordeal. "For myself, Papa, I care nothing. But Koh-pan-gyi is my father and my mother. Like a child at his elders' bidding, he will attempt the impossible. He understands neither fear nor failure. If he succeeds what can save him? If he fail, then will his heart break."

Williams was not naturally a harsh man, he had never been the kind of leader to expose his subordinates to risks from which he himself shrank. But he was a Welshman, ambitious; his annual bonus, his very career, might hang upon the success of this forlorn hope. Sleepless nights and over-anxious days had, perhaps, clouded his judgment and blunted his humanity. Haggard and unshaven, his red-rimmed eyes blazing and his voice shrill with fatigue, he drove Ba Thein from his presence with taunts and curses.

With the comfortable fatallam of his race Ba Thein lolled through the day beside his elephant. The great beast slumbered noisily, unconscious of the unusual attentions of his driver who held the insect world at bay with a leafy branch and plied Koh-pan-gyi's favourite dainties in readiness for the awakening.

The sun's power was waning. The elephant stirred uneasily and awoke, alert and irritable. Perhaps some sixth sense had warned him of impending danger or Ba Thein's nervousness had touched some telepathic chord in his nature. He snorted his disdain of the proffered delicacies, picking at a tit-bit here and there with his trunk, toying with it and discarding it, untasted. At Ba Thein's third summons he reluctantly bent a massive foreleg to enable the driver to clamber into his seat and under repeated goading rolled sulkily towards the river.

It was four o'clock when Koh-pan-gyi sidled down a steep bank to the pool's edge. The other elephants had been withdrawn to a safe distance; only the forest staff and a small knot of villagers were to witness his prowess. He hesitated momentarily at the brink while the watchers held their breath; then, slowly he entered the water, and as he did so, trumpeted a thrilling challenge to the world at large.

"There is death in the air," muttered Po Toke. For the next 20 minutes, the spectators were treated to a wonderful display of elephant aquatics. Koh-pan-gyi bathed royally, he surged across the pool in swift rushes, he submerged in deep water, he rolled in the shallows, spouting fountains of spray from his trunk and churning the water high against the banks.

Ba Thein, swimming and clinging, coaxing and threatening, seemed helpless. Williams, his vocabulary exhausted, raged rum-bly on the shore. The Yay-sin, if breath; then, slowly he entered the water, and as he did so, trumpeted a thrilling challenge to the world at large.

such there be, covered in the depths.

"Ganja, many cakes thereof, shall be given to my lord if he will but hearken!" spluttered the Karen.

The elephant appeared to accept the bribe. Hushh! In the crude form is a common elephant medicine and Koh-pan-gyi was a licensed drug-addict. He relinquished control of the situation and awaited orders.

A few moments later the elephant was again headed across the pool but, this time, of set purpose. He approached the log wall with a rhythmic rise and fall of powerful shoulders, a frill of tawny ripples about his neck showing the speed of his passage.

At a sharp word of command from Ba Thein the massive trunk, like a giant serpent, squirmed upward and forward over the lowest tier of logs, curled and took hold. Inch by inch the glistening shoulders, one foreleg and, finally, the other emerged from the troubled waters.

His fore-feet firmly planted, Koh-pan-gyi disengaged his trunk and began to take stock of the situation, prying, probing and testing with sharp tags and many shakings of the head. Twice he took a firm grip and settled back for a steady pull, twice he lost his footing to slide into the pool with a mountainous splash, only to repeat the slow process of covering his lost stance.

The onlookers murmured their disappointment, but a close observer might have noticed that, at the third attempt, Koh-pan-gyi had taken a purchase on the same log that had resisted his second effort. Ba Thein alone was conscious of the fact, and was encouraging his beast with shrill incoherencies. The logs creaked and groaned, tiny spouts of yellow water gushed from the crevices as the strain increased. The whole face of the jam shuddered and heaved.

Surely the elephant was lower in the water than before? A jarring crash and a fountain of spray, Koh-pan-gyi toppled backwards, tearing away the key-log in his fall.

For a moment the issue hung in the balance, then, with a sobbing roar, the river burst through the breach; the face of the jam bulged and collapsed in thunderous ruin. Pandemonium was loose. A foam-crested wall of water hurtled seaward with giant logs scurrying and leaping like minnows in its

Thrill Of First Squeeze

BY ELY CULBERTSON

DEAR Mr. Culbertson: Until yesterday, my supreme bridge ambition was to be dealt thirteen spades. That, however, is now a thing of the past, because at long last I have known a thrill that I am sure is much more satisfying. I won't keep you in suspense. Last night I made my first squeeze! This was the hand which heaven sent me:

wake. Tossing timbers and flung spume covered the surface of the pool. The elephant had vanished.

With instinctive wisdom Koh-pan-gyi had submerged to allow the demons he had unleashed to pass over him. But it could only be a matter of minutes before he must break the surface with his trunk, in quest of air, whereas this madstrom might continue for an hour. An elephant's trunk is as sensitive as it is powerful, and should the delicate tip be crushed between the wheeling logs, death by drowning might prove a merciful release.

By some kind of fate the first wave had flung Ba Thein high up the bank. Bleeding from a gashed forehead the Karen's first thought was for his beast. He dashed the blood from his eyes, leapt madly upon a floating timber and, balancing like a rope-dancer, bounded a hundred times and again from the very jaws of heaving death and grinding doom in his passage to the mouth of the narrows.

Slower and hence more perilous was the path of Maung Po Toke. The old man's motive will never be known. Bystanders, who attempted to detain him as he ran down to the water's edge, say that the look in his eyes froze them where they stood. Pike pole in hand the drift collector followed

"I was South. West led a low diamond. East played the queen and I won. I saw that I would have to take to the spade finesse sooner or later, so tried it at the second trick. West did not cover my queen and, when the ten dropped from East, it became apparent that West had started with four spades. Naturally, I could not lead another round without letting East ruff, so instead I ruffed a diamond in dummy, led a heart to my own ten, and ruffed another diamond with the heart king. I then reentered my hand with the club ace and ran off the rest of my trumps, finally coming down to the spade deuce, the heart five, the diamond jack, and the club deuce. West, of course, hung on to his spades, therefore could have only one club which, from his jack and ten discarding, I hoped was the king. Dummy at this point had the A-J-9 of spades and the queen of clubs. I led my last trump and was delighted to see West squirming in his chair. I knew then that my diagnosis had been correct and that he could not let go any card without giving me the rest of the tricks. As it happened, he held on to the club king and threw a spade. I let go dummy's club queen and took another spade finesse, then cashed the spade ace, dropping the king and establishing the nine spot.

"Of course, all this squeezing only resulted in an extra trick on my small slam contract, but that in no way affected the thrill that comes once in a lifetime.

"Enthusiastically yours,

E. M. S. St. Louis."

Comments hardly are necessary, I imagine that henceforth E. M. S. will rattle off squeeze plays with his eyes closed and one hand tied behind his back.

the man who had mocked him across the pounding logs.

Suddenly, in a momentary gap ahead of him, Ba Thein caught sight of a train of bubbles. He was just in time to turn aside the swift onset of a jostling tree-butt before a few inches of writhing trunk broke the surface. A gasp, a sobbing intake of air and the trunk was gone. But Koh-pan-gyi still lived. The Karen gripped the heavy steel-tipped goad which, by a miracle, he still retained, and prepared to do battle for his charge.

It was then that he noticed Po Toke. "Good for evil, father?" panted Ba Thein. "The bird that perches on the golden hill shall be called the golden crow, my son!" was the cryptic reply as the dance of death began.

Like sentient monsters the logs leaped and nuzzled at their prey. Changing and shifting from log to log, sliding and slithering, pushing with pole and hauling with hook, the Christian and the pagan fought like demons, side by side, to maintain that square yard of open water. Their sole encouragement a writhing trunk-tip, a gasp, an intake of air at regular intervals.

In forty minutes the watchers had lived through the suspense of as many years. But logs were beginning to find their way downstream. Gaps widened, intervals lengthened and leaps must follow suit. Po Toke was exhausted, his margin of safety (laughable word) was decreasing with every change of position.

At last the old man leaped mislaid his footing and was gone. "Thy gods be kind to thee, father," sobbed Ba Thein, almost at the end of his own wiry strength.

Success was assured. Ba Thein was just preparing to swim ashore and await Koh-pan-gyi's good pleasure when a log, which some mysterious undertow had held submerged, rose like a giant saurian from the depths and plunged towards the elephant's exposed trunk. It was too late to use his goad, but the Karen never faltered. Full in the path of the charging mass he flung his own battered body. With a sickening thud the log glanced off a fellow and swirled idly by. The trunk tip flouted free.

An hour later, in the gathering dusk, Koh-pan-gyi rose gingerly to the surface and slowly dragged himself ashore. He appeared to be searching for something along the bank but his finding was not to his taste. The elephant's hoarse trumpeting brought men running to the spot. Ba Thein, too, had come ashore.

Cranston, I'd give anything to be able to shake hands with that fellow," said Williams sadly.

"Don't get morbid, old man. He wouldn't have understood," replied the assistant as he drew the forest manager gently away.

The body of Po Toke was never recovered. Perhaps there was a Yay-sin after all.

SIGNIFICANT GERMAN PRESS COMMENT

Success Of Hitler Anti-Versailles Policy

CHIEF OF HUNGARIAN ARMY RESIGNS

BUDAPEST, YESTERDAY. GENERAL KEREZTES FISCHER, CHIEF OF THE HUNGARIAN GENERAL STAFF, HAS RESIGNED.

It is understood that he will be succeeded by General Werth, former commander of the Military Academy.

General Fischer is a friend of the Regent, Admiral Horthy. — Reuter.

UTMOST RETICENCE
Budapest, Yesterday.

General Werth, who has hitherto held the post of commander of the Officers Training College in Budapest, comes of German stock.

Official quarters preserve the utmost reticence with regard to this change in the army command during these momentous days.

The Hungarian press has received instructions to refrain from any comment on it, but from a reliable source it is learnt that it has to do with the line of policy taken by the Hungarian Government with respect to Czechoslovakia.

It deserves to be added that during the last few days, Hungary has for political reasons adopted a very restrained attitude towards developments in Czechoslovakia.

Meanwhile the Hungarian press this morning continues to demand a solution of the problem of the Hungarian minority in Czechoslovakia on the same lines as have been adopted in the case of the Sudeten Germans.

CALM VIEW
The period of three months foreseen in the Munich agreement for solution of the Polish and Hungarian problems is regarded here as distinctly favouring the Hungarians, seeing that at the conclusion of this period, Czechoslovakia will have shrunk considerably in size and its main line of defences will by then be in German hands.

These three months, declares the "Esti Ujacs" will be used to strengthen co-operation between Hungary and Poland with a view to joint action. — Trans-Ocean.

London, Yesterday.

Mr. Chamberlain was heartily cheered as he left Downing Street this afternoon to spend the week-end at Chequers. — Reuter.

ENGAGEMENT

The engagement is announced between Eu Keng Loon, second son of Mr. and Mrs. Eu Tong Sen, of Hong Kong, and Nancy Kan Shiu Kwan, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kan Tong Po, of Hong Kong. (Shanghai and Straits papers please copy.)

MARRIAGE

MARTIN — ROBERTSON. — On October 1st 1938 at St. John's Cathedral by the Very Rev. Dean Wilson assisted by the Rev. K. Mackenzie Dow of Union Church, Thomas Addis, younger son of the Very Rev. Alex. Martin, D.D., LL.D., K.H.C., Principal-Emeritus of the New College, Edinburgh, and of Mrs. Martin, to Lillian Constance Seale, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leale Robertson, Windsor, and grand-daughter of the late Rev. John Robertson, LL.D. of Upton Park Slough.

Berlin, Yesterday.

Describing the Munich agreement as the most important historical event since the World War, the "Voelkischer Beobachter" also points out that at the same time it must be regarded as the success of Chancellor Hitler's anti-Versailles policy.

The Munich agreement, it insists, represents the complete defeat of the "evil spirit of Versailles," seeing that it has been brought about with the participation of the heads of the Government of those European powers which were responsible for the Versailles dictate.

"We all join to-day," the central organ of the Nazi Party then goes on to say, "in thanking the Fuehrer. We thank him for a deed which has not only made the German people happier, mightier and greater but which, in the manner in which it has been achieved, is unique in the history of nations."

WITHOUT SWORD
"We know of no event of a like character comparable to this one, which has made it possible for territory in the heart of Europe, twice as large as Saxony and with three million inhabitants, to be gained without a stroke of the sword."

"We cannot say yet whether the idea of eternal peace has been realised. But we know that the Fuehrer and the statesmen who met together in Munich have shown that a national aim can be achieved by peaceful means provided political determination is combined with the greatest sense of responsibility."

"Our thanks and our appreciation are therefore extended to those statesmen too who have followed the initiative of the Fuehrer in a truly magnificent manner, and have given an example of political co-operation of those peoples in whose hands is reposing to-day the fate of the world."

GERMAN TRIUMPH
"In view of the greatness of the success which has been achieved for Germany in Munich, it deserves to be called to mind that realisation of a greater Germany" in the form in which it is being completed at the present moment by Adolf Hitler, had the authoritarian form of government as its inevitable preliminary condition. It would be foolish to suppose that parliamentary Germany would have been able to achieve incorporation of Austria into the Reich or liberation of Sudetenland. Only an authoritarian state could have developed the power and might needed to achieve these ends." — Trans-Ocean.

"THE TIMES" SAYS

London, Yesterday.

The tremendous enthusiasm which greeted Mr. Chamberlain on his return last evening from the historic four-power conference, finds an echo in the morning papers, the leading articles in which are all inspired by the Premier's declaration that an "honourable peace" had been secured which would outlast the present generation.

"The Times" writes that the agreement reached concerning Czechoslovakia now appears less important than the other work accomplished at Munich. The conference had not only raised new hopes for the future.

NOT PIOUS WISH
The joint declaration of the Chancellor and the Premier was not merely an expression of a pious wish destined to be quickly forgotten before being put to the test. The two statesmen were fully aware that there are still various questions in dispute between the two countries, and that those questions must be settled as soon as possible in the interest of European peace.

DAWN OF NEW DAY
The "Daily Mail" says that in three days Mr. Chamberlain had not only eliminated the danger of war but had laid the foundation of a lasting peace in Europe. The nightmare which had haunted everyone three days ago has now vanished in the dawn of a new day.

But the terrible hours during which mankind had clearly perceived the danger of an imminent catastrophe must, according to the paper, never be forgotten. — Trans-Ocean.

British Boycott Of Jap. Goods

Hankow, Yesterday.

The results of the boycott of Japanese goods in Britain were now making themselves slowly but surely felt, declared Mrs. Haldane, wife of Professor Haldane, in an interview with Reuter's correspondent after her arrival here from Hong Kong on Thursday night.

Mrs. Haldane has come to China on a special mission to Madame Chiang Kai-shek. She represents the China Campaign Committee and the Women's World Committee against War and Fascism. She is also correspondent for the London "Daily Herald."

Mrs. Haldane declared that she was most anxious to correct the erroneous impression that they in England were not doing their share for China.

Exports from Japan to Britain were dwindling, Mrs. Haldane stated, and the anti-Japanese boycott was daily making progress.

PRETTY GOOD
Many women were abandoning silk underwear and stockings of Japanese make, and for the first time in many years, Christmas toys and crackers were not to be of Japanese manufacture.

Mrs. Haldane's present programme is indefinite, but "when I get home, I intend to speak at about 100 meetings and collect money for China—and I am pretty good at collecting money!" — Reuter.

HITLER'S TRIUMPHAL RETURN TO BERLIN

BERLIN, YESTERDAY.

HERR HITLER MADE A TRIUMPHAL RETURN TO BERLIN THIS MORNING, BEING HAILED BY VAST CROWDS AMID TUMULTUOUS CHEERING AS THE "DELIVERER OF THE SUDETEN GERMANS AND THE PRESERVER OF PEACE."

The welcome surpassed even that when he returned from Vienna after the annexation of Austria.

Herr Hitler drove to the Chancellery through densely lined streets, the reception reaching a climax in the Wilhelmstrasse, where 100,000 gave a thunderous ovation while the bells of all churches in the capital rang a peal of welcome.

BEAMING WITH PLEASURE
In response to the cries of the crowd, the Fuehrer four times appeared on the balcony of the Reich Chancellery, accompanied by Herr Henlein, the Sudeten leader, dressed in civilian clothes.

Herr Hitler, beaming with pleasure, bowed in all directions and saluted the crowd. — Reuter.

WELL AND CHEERFUL
Berlin, Yesterday.

After inspecting the guard of honour and after being presented with a bouquet by Sudeten Germans, the Chancellor, who looked well and cheerful, entered his car with Field-Marshal Goering and Dr. Goebbels.

Dense crowds who lined the route from the station to the Palace in the Wilhelmstrasse cheered with wild enthusiasm as the car drove past.

After entering the Palace, Hitler showed himself on the balcony in the company of the Sudeten German leader, Konrad Henlein, and Field-Marshal Goering. Their appearance was greeted with an endless storm of cheering. — Trans-Ocean.

French Parliament To Meet

Paris, Yesterday.

At a meeting of the Council of Ministers to-day, attended by the Premier, M. Edouard Daladier, it was decided to convene an extraordinary meeting of Parliament on Tuesday to hear the reading of the Munich agreement.

At the meeting, President Albert Lebrun thanked M. Daladier for his "enlightened, vigilant, patriotic and civic courage, with which he assumed and fulfilled his grave and delicate mission and brought it to a successful conclusion."

The Government to-night considered measures necessary for the sending home of reservists called up during the crisis.

PROGRESSIVE DEMOBILISATION
This, it is stated, will be carried out progressively according to a pre-arranged plan which will safeguard the national defence.

It is hoped here that some such arrangement as was reached between Britain and Germany, to consult each other re-

Autumn Diary

THE Bolero Survives in Fur!
Silver Fox mounted on a little jacket of black crepe de chine. The brief bush above the slim silhouette is flattering beyond belief to the figure. Smart, expensive, the ensemble is the last word in artist's chic.

Claridge's last week saw this "Highland Swing" trip through the foyer. Fashion show sponsored by the International Wool Secretariat demonstrated that wool can be used to create smart clothes suitable for all occasions. Woollen evening coats, dinner gowns, and tailored topcoats were among the most startling and novel of these new fashions.

By Lansdell and Wilson, this black wool coat has wide revers and flap pockets, piped with red plaid to match the Glen-garry hat, which is trimmed with a bow of black wool ribbon.

Meet Madame Vionnet. Seldom seen by her clients, the grande dame of fashion lives in great retirement. On rare occasions you may meet her in the salons of her shop, a small gray-haired lady with great dignity, who began as a pin girl at Callot's, revolutionised the principles of dressmaking and now triumphantly carries on her great tradition.

SO far, no reader has come forward with advice on dissolving Meritol-Metol. If any amateur is using this agent for developing his own films, I would be glad to hear from him in order to pass on the information. It was just as much for service of this kind as for the competition that this page was instituted.

ENTRIES

Some time ago I mentioned that the standard of pictures submitted was gradually rising. I wish however that I was as satisfied regarding the promptness with which prints are sent in. During this week, I have received no less than thirty really magnificent photos from several enthusiastic amateurs. Coming at such a late time in the month, these pictures do not get a fair showing. I can only insert four pictures at a time, so that four out of thirty is a very poor percentage. The remedy lies of course, with yourselves. Do send in your prints early! I can only quote the probable words of your headmaster — "I am saying this for your own good!"

This week's reproductions are good specimens of the beautiful landscape encountered in our Colony.

I am not going to attempt to criticize them, each is a satisfying example of the photographer's art.

ALOHA

This will be the last page I shall write for the "Herald" for some time. I hope to proceed to England on leave (God and Hitler permitting) and will be handing over next week to "Shutter."

I hope to return in July with thousands of negatives, especially of the type of scene never encountered in Hong Kong — "Snowscapes." I would like to thank all those who have written in to say what they think of the page and suggestions, also that large body of friends who remain silent but who, I know, are there none the less.

Au revoir!

Youthful CHARM

Hair styles of today make careful washing a necessity.

Ordinary soaps should be avoided. The free alkali they contain soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it under the frequent shampooings necessary to keep the hair beautiful.

Discriminating women everywhere use Mulsified because its pure, natural and greaseless oils keep the scalp well-nourished. Mulsified leaves the hair soft and easy to manage—preserves the natural wave and colour—makes it sparkle with new life, gloss and lustre.

Two or three teaspoonfuls gives an abundance of rich, creamy lather—cleanses thoroughly—completely removes dirt, dust and dandruff.

ATTITUDE to ANGELS

Why Magda is Never Without a Male

"YOU know," said Chloe, "I notice a definite falling-off in the attitude men show to women: I am not referring to politeness of the 'Will you have my seat?' type. I mean something more than that. In fact, 'the bird on a perch' is more our position to-day than 'the goddess on a pedestal' who reigned in the Edwardian days; even if the woman of that period was 'mighty and lovely' she had her position, and the woman of unquestionable character had such dignity that she demanded and received respect as her due."

Chloe herself is a straight-backed little beauty with an eye which can flash in the style approved by the dramatic novelists. She neither invites nor accepts intimacies; and I had just seen her feathers considerably ruffled by a man who had, in a most friendly manner, slapped her warmly on the back. Chloe resented this furiously and he was blissfully unaware of her indignation. As a matter of fact, several of the women present would have welcomed his indication of affection and esteem; indeed, from any other woman I would have suspected that my attention was being drawn to the incident in case I had overlooked it!

Salute With the Clicking Heels

The Teutonic salute with the clicking heels and stiff bow arouses almost ribald comment, and I have seldom seen a hand-kissing Russian arouse more than embarrassment in the lady he has honoured. Our men positively sniff at what they consider these dandish mannerisms.

I said to Chloe: "I think it must have been a bit chilly on a pedestal; the little bird on the perch, as you like to call her, has a nice friendly time of it, she has her neck scratched, and she is offered sugar and is generally petted and loved and made much of, which I am sure is more enjoyable than lonely grandeur."

"Oh, no," replied Chloe emphatically. "I don't like the man who thinks because I make a little joke that he can hold my hand—and if I let him hold my hand he can kiss me—"

"And if you let him kiss you?"

"Oh, then he thinks I am 'game' for anything and he becomes a problem."

"And if you shut him up at once?"

"That is just the trouble; that is the last I see of him." Here Chloe giggled self-consciously. "I find I am just compelled to go without my due allowance of reverence if I am to have any attention at all."

What Does He Say?

"What does Peter say to all this?"

"You know what husbands are. If he is interested in somebody else at the time he will say what a nice party it was, but if he is not occupied he will watch me, and I will have a certain lecture later on all about the dignity of the married woman. Men are so trying; if I keep my so-called dignity Peter will lose all interest in me because I will be neglected and he will have none of that competitive feeling about me." Chloe sighed before she continued. "It is all wrong the way we are brought up. Our mothers are no help to us at all when they instruct us in how we should behave."

I had just seen her feathers considerably ruffled...

My thoughts turned to Magda. She is young with the slender charm of the modern girl. Pretty and vivacious one would picture her as the queen bee of her circle of friends. True enough, Magda is never without a male escort—but never the same one twice, and each male in turn seems to be on the most intimate just-before-we-announce-our-engagement footing with Magda—and that is as far as it gets. With much tropicoid, for I am genuinely fond of Magda and I don't want her to feel I am an interfering old busybody, I asked her:

"Magda, why don't you keep your boy friends? Why is it you change so often? Are you never satisfied or is it your fault?"

"Oh, man," she replied in the local idiom. "I don't know what it is. I am so nice to them and they seem to be so hopelessly in love with me to-day, and to-morrow they are gone."

"Aren't you perhaps too nice to them?" I was a little diffident. "You may give them an impression you are 'cheap' when you allow so many of them such unrestricted liberties?"

"Don't be silly," Magda looked genuinely surprised. "They might think I am 'cold' if I choked them off—and then where would I be?"

A Matter of Temperature

Obviously I could not help where the decision of behaviour was controlled by a matter of temperature.

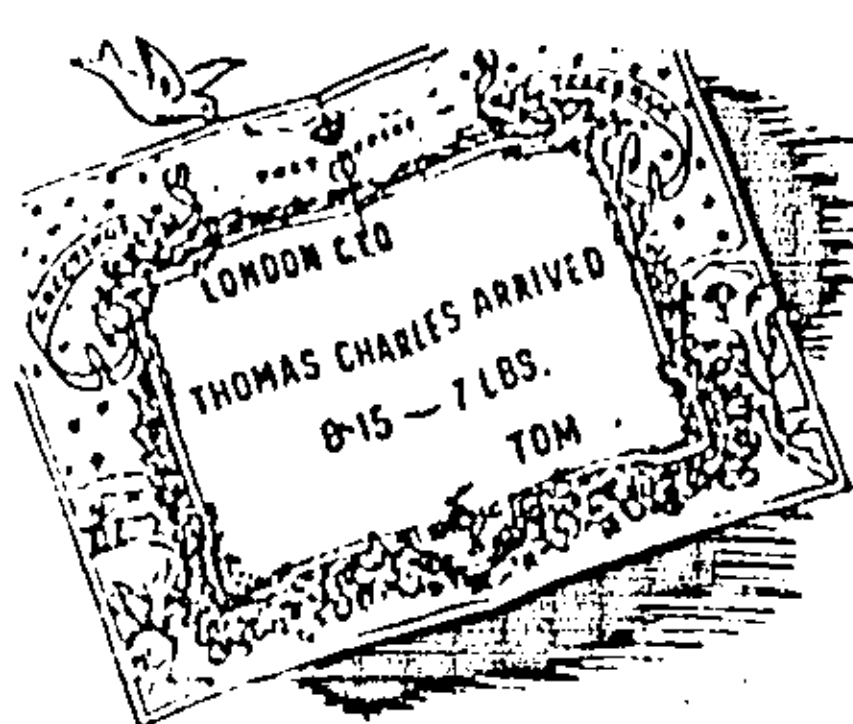

Alice's problem is the other extreme. I hear the lads speaking well of her, but they never take her out despite her curls and peach-like skin. "Too good," they say, and strange to relate, they are not paying her a compliment. After this I was almost relieved when my seven-year-old informed me with pride, "Christopher loves me!"

"How do you know?" I ventured.

"He kisses me," she stated without embarrassment and with obvious satisfaction.

Should I now read her a lecture on cheap behaviour and instruct her in demanding reverence from the other sex and risk having her neglected like Alice? And if I trust to luck may she not suffer the misfortune of "temperature" worries which beset Magda? How right the Greeks were to insist on moderation in everything!

ANALYSING THE FURIES

Or Love Affair Under Difficulties

IN every love affair of magnitude there is a critical period—a time of difficulties, sometimes emotional, sometimes imposed by circumstances—which, if not managed skilfully, may result in a final parting. This questionnaire is concerned with good and bad ways of getting through the danger zone.

Group A

1. Are you nervous, sensitive to the approach of troubles?
2. Do you take the initiative in raising difficulties from the sheer fear that the other person might "get in first"?
3. Do you adopt a provocative attitude—hinting that you will go off with somebody else, for instance—in order to gain a victory?
4. Do you ever resort to threats, politely veiled or otherwise, which you secretly know you would not or could not carry out?
5. Are you given to moods of mournful self-pity?

Group B

1. Do you guard against taking transient impulses seriously, either in yourself or the other person?
2. Do you show a strong determination to resist difficulties when they arise?
3. Do you know what you want and take a firm, clear line?
4. Can you forgive a wrongdoing casually instead of making a "grand gesture" of it?
5. Are you guided in your tactics by this realisation—that as the lover has behaved to some former love, so he (or she) may behave to you?

Group C

1. Will you endure almost anything rather than make a scene?
2. Conversely, do you plunge into explanations and discussions when you know in your heart that it would be better not to put your grievances into words?
3. Are you unable to control your tongue when quarrelling? (That is to say, do you find yourself casting general aspersions which will range afterwards instead of sticking to the matter in hand?)
4. Is it hard for you to behave with good humour after a losing battle?

COMMENTARY

Group A

YOU have an excellent chance of bringing your love out of the danger zone unscathed if you can answer "No" to four out of the five questions in this group.

Consider the first two, for example: To look for trouble is generally to find it. Indeed, it is almost better not to recognise trouble when it comes than to be over-sensitive to its approach.

That ancient counsel about taking the offensive when you fear to be attacked has given rise to a vast amount of strife and misery between individuals as well as between nations, and in love it is by no means a dignified policy. To act upon fear can never be dignified.

As to Questions 3 and 4, it is nearly always wise to abstain from throwing out a definite challenge, for that is likely to call forth resistance. And if your challenge fails of effect, your position will be very obviously weakened. When the threat happens to be one you cannot carry out the result at best is to provoke affectionate laughter; at worst, your bluff may be called with humiliating consequences.

Finally, beware of self-pity, particularly when it expresses itself in fits of heavy depression. Gloom is infectious and will soon send your lover to seek a cure elsewhere. Strained brightness is, of course, equally undesirable.

Group B

THIS group calls for affirmatives, especially to the first three questions. I have already touched on the necessity of making allowance for passing humours. In all emotional relationships there are phases of reaction and recoil produced by the unusual tension of feeling. Such disturbances should never be exaggerated into a cause for parting.

Those mysterious impulses to renounce each other, those benighted moods in which last night's magic seems to have died a sudden, chilly death—give yourself time to discover how genuine they are before you act on them. You will not often regret having waited.

When real and tangible problems beset you, a resolute manner of facing them will greatly enhance your value to the lover. Weak, wavering, and uncertain methods are not only ineffectual in themselves, but will show you up to very great disadvantage.

Group C

If you can reply to these questions with a sincere negative, you are a shrewd and well-balanced woman, and your love affair is not likely to come to an ignominious end.

You are aware that, although it is foolish to meet difficulties half-way, once they have actually arisen it will generally be far better to have a quarrel—even a violent quarrel—than to go on in a state of mute suffering for that will make you dreary through and through; and prolonged dreariness is more damaging than brief anger.

With all but the strongest and most ruthless men, a very occasional "scene" will prove a wholesome corrective. (I am assuming, naturally, that you have good grounds for it, and are not merely gratifying an instinct for drama).

But it is a real folly to bring your grievances to light when there is no reasonable purpose to be served by it. My advice is always—when in doubt, say nothing.

The conclusion which follows from Questions 3 and 4 is self-evident. A quarrel now and again may prove an invigorating tonic to love, but only if it is resolutely prevented from leaving an unpleasant after-taste.

"I expect he's constipated. Show me your tongue, Johnnie. Yes, I thought so. See how it's coated. Your head aches, too, doesn't it Johnnie; and you feel poorly? Sure signs that he's out of sorts."

That's the trouble, Mrs. Wilson, his system wants a thorough cleansing. Give him a dose of 'California Syrup of Figs' now and he'll be as happy as a lark in a few hours. It's difficult to keep them regular—when they're young they get lazy about it and are soon upset. But you can avoid all that by giving Johnnie a dose of 'California Syrup of Figs' regularly every Saturday night. It will keep him fit and save you a world of sickness and worry.

"Safe? You couldn't have anything safer! It's a natural fruit laxative, and acts naturally on the bowels. That's why so many doctors recommend it, and give it to their own children."

"Let Johnnie go to the drug store for a bottle now. And let Johnnie be sure to say 'California Syrup of Figs' then there will be no mistake."

"You can't afford to take chances with medicines, particularly with the children. No matter whether it is for myself or a patient, I always insist on the best that money can buy."

Montana Mountain Mix-Up.

At the Montana Annual Rodeo held this Saturday at Blanc, Mont., amazing scenes were witnessed in the bull-riding contest.

For you dumb hicks who have never seen bull-riding, Rodeo's greatest thrill, the idea is that cowboys endeavour to sit on the back of a steer for as long as they can, meanwhile the spectators hand over the old dough-re-mi to the assembled bookies. Mr. Steer dislikes this proceeding more than somewhat, with the result that the cowboy gets, literally, bumped off.

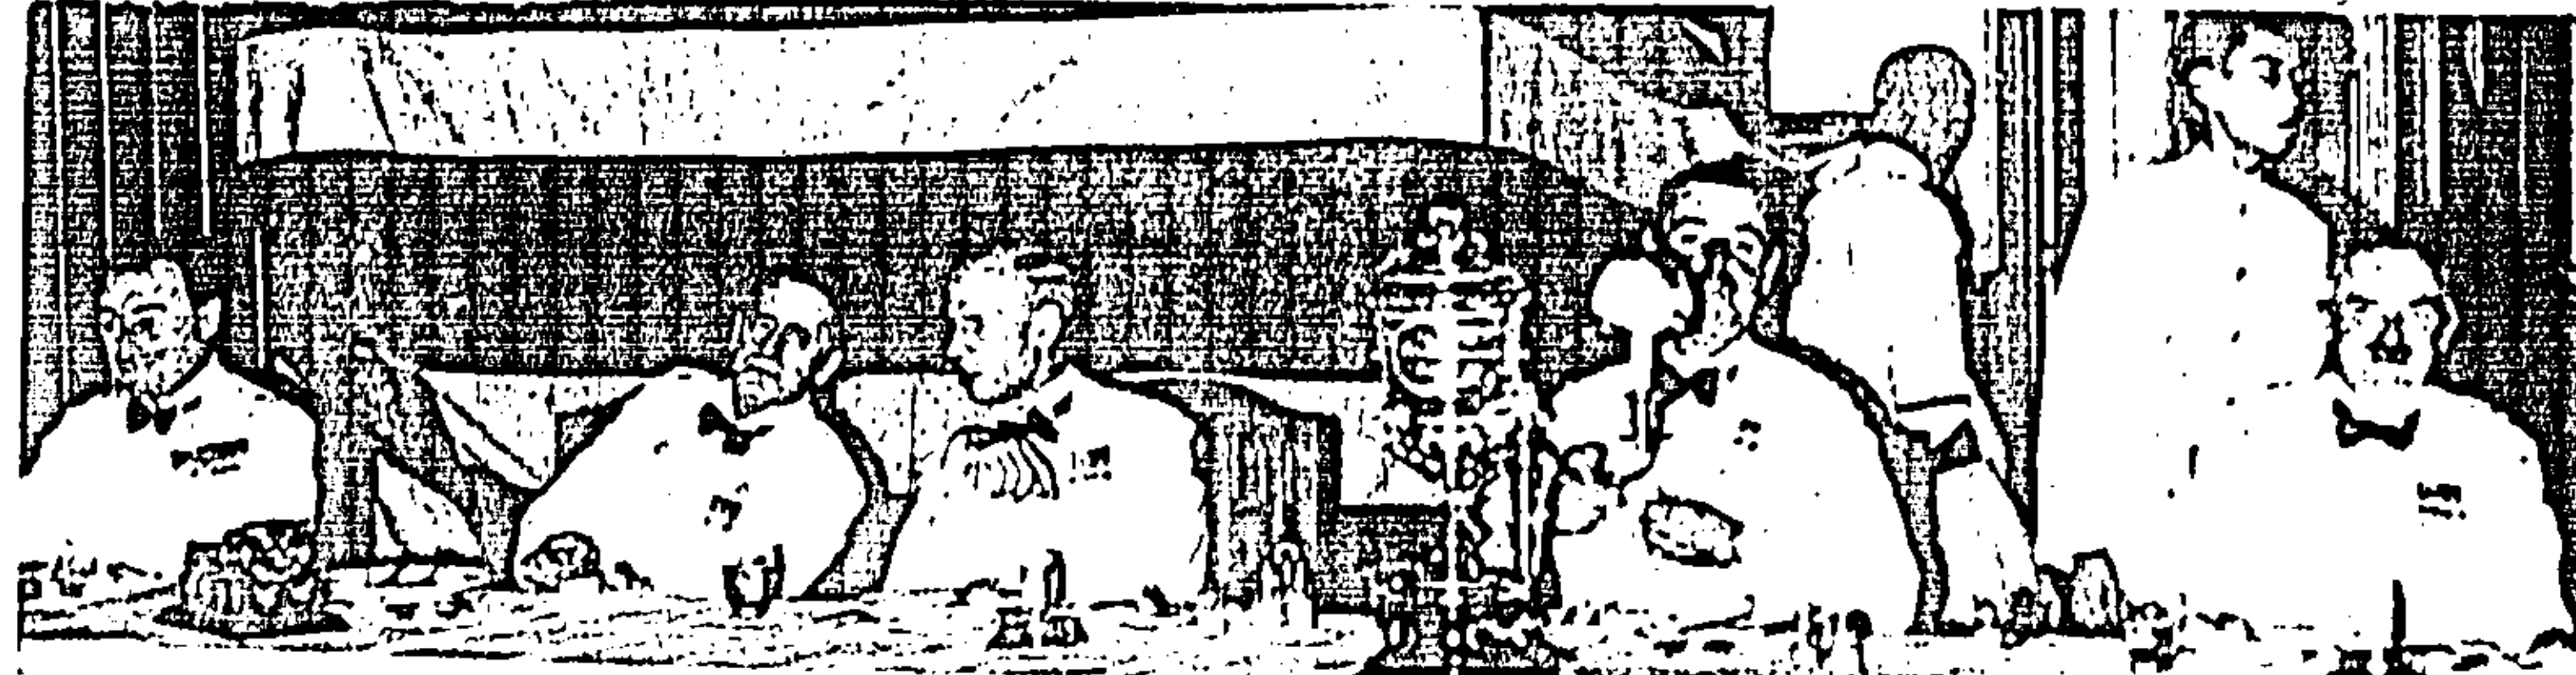

Elmer Cowdray, however, got mixed up in his directions, and carried the bull on his back four times round the ring. This was so unusual that the bookies had to reverse the procedure and hand over to the spectators. Elmer C. was unanimously voted rodeo champ, and all had a good time.

In an interview afterwards, Elmer intimated that it was a diet of Fresh Milk supplied by the Dairy Farm, Hong Kong, that had set him on the road to success.

LADY OF PARIS

THERE is a saying in Europe that in order to catch her man, the Frenchwoman "spreads a net" calculated to ensnare even the most obdurate male. Probably no woman on earth knows better man's vulnerable points, or how best to appeal to masculine vanity.

THE business of knowing how "to please" men has been the Frenchwoman's supreme accomplishment for centuries; in fact this art is such an important part of the technique of winning a Frenchman that the word is associated with sex attraction throughout French conversation.

THE young Frenchman looks at a girl and if he is attracted by what he sees, remarks "Elle me plait beaucoup". "she pleases me very much." It is almost this best compliment.

THE Frenchwoman learns early how to get the best from everything about herself that greets the eye, but an almost equal consideration is flattering attention and pliable charm. She can be witty, gay, sympathetic or sentimental as the occasion or the man demands. She cultivates esprit in proportion to her lack of beauty. For esprit is so valued in France that in ugly duckling known for quick wit and gaiety of manner may become the most popular member of her social set.

ACCORDING to our standards, Frenchwomen are not, as a race, beautiful; yet, given the same frugal portion of natural beauty, no woman of any other country can create such an impression of attractiveness and feminine allure. Knowing that her initial attraction can seldom rest upon natural beauty, the Parisienne has fostered in the Frenchman an exotic taste for something less natural, which she can have.

THIS "something" is more subtle, more artificial if you like, but none the less a wonderful substitute for natural beauty. And it has the added advantage of being able to go on attracting into middle age or later. Its name the world over is French Chic.

WOMEN of other countries have tried to imitate it, and the Frenchwoman will admit that her closest rivals are the smart South American women. In addition to their special chic, she will tell you with a sigh "What beautiful legs they have, and what natural beauty."

IN France chic has no fixed prescription. It refers not only to clothes and a smart way of wearing them, but to charming manners and individual presentation. Each Parisienne bases her expression of her good and bad points. In order to enhance some precious natural attribute, she will change or sacrifice current fashions without a quiver. Let me give you an example.

CROSSING the Rue Royal recently, I found myself following in the wake of a tall, slender woman at whom every man looked appreciatively as he passed. She was wearing a beautifully cut brown astrakhan coat, two-thirds length, with a smart full swinging back and nearly collarless—thereby cutting down her height a bit and revealing a pretty neck and hairline. On her head, perched at the right rakish angle, she wore a Cossack type chapeau of brown astrakhan with a touch of green on its front brim and a similar touch of vivid green at the back. Below the coat a narrow brown skirt was slit at the side back to show more of one "calf. Everything about her was the last word in fashion, except that her skirt was unusually short. When I looked to see the reason I beheld the prettiest pair of legs I've ever seen on a Frenchwoman; and on one ankle I glimpsed a thin gold bracelet beneath the filmy brown stocking. Her silhouette was perfect, even though she had adapted the matter of skirt lengths to her individual charms.

AS we passed the Cafe Weber, the attention she received from the men sitting there determined me to see her face. Goodness! A huge aquiline nose; a wide, rather cynical mouth; high cheek bones and perfect eyebrows; and a woman about 40. Her make-up, an even, pale ochre shade with no rouge whatever except on the lips, had the flattering effect of bringing her strong features into one even plane. Striking dark eyes were her one good feature, made softer and more handsome by blue-black eye shadows. She had managed to keep her face within the ensemble of her smartness, yet to draw marked attention to her beautiful ankles. This, plus a proud carriage and manner of walking—and an ugly woman had all the requisites for perfect French attractiveness.

ONLY one other natural physical attribute ranks with beautiful ankles in France. That is a beautiful bust. And while many have a good bust, very few have lovely legs, so common to American girls.

A seductive manner of walking and holding herself is considered essential by the Frenchwoman, who emphasizes her figure, as a feminine one, with all its curves. When American and English young women were trying to make themselves into imitations of boys, with no busts or hips, the Frenchwoman continued to accent both. She never abandoned her special manner of walking, which always brings attention to the latter: a subtle and always fascinating movement.

THE kind of smartness in the toilette most admired by the conservative Frenchman has as its essential principle a meticulous dressing of the hair, particularly of the hairline, all round the head. That is why the coiffeur is such an important fellow in France—Frenchwomen of all classes go to him once a week if possible. In consequence, Frenchwomen can wear any kind of hat with ease and smartness, head and hat often appearing to be one unit. And after hair interest comes eyes. From a quite ordinary pair of brown or hazel eyes, the Parisienne makes a pair of languorous, sensuous orbs, or a pair of sparkling jewels which compel attention and hold it.

EVERY young Frenchwoman, no matter what her class, has marriage as her fixed goal, and her wits in the battle to this end are sharpened by the doleful knowledge that there are seven of her to every male in France. And it does not take a foreign man living in France long to discover that she is a different creature from the mythical, rather morally light, French girl of his previously formulated opinion.

AS an American journalist, married to a Frenchwoman who had been "spreading the net" during two years of friendship, told me recently, "After the Frenchwoman lands a man, she doesn't let him down. She continues to please him, and she does it by looking after his creature comforts as perhaps no other woman does. She is more devoted to her menage, her children and 'her man' than any other woman I've known—and she never stops being as seductive as she knows how."

"THAT's a pretty swell recommendation you're giving her," I remarked.

"YES, and you might add, also," he said dryly, "that a man never needs to worry that she will exceed his budget at the end of the month."

STRAIGHT Tips for Straight HAIR

- Pageboy Transformed - - All By Kindness -

THE first coiffure shown is a good way to manage a pageboy bob, or any half long hair, while on holiday or when the perm has nearly all grown out. Comb it all back and tie it in a bunch of curls, like Bonnie Prince Charlie, at the back. If you have straight hair, three or four curlers at the back will do the trick. Comb the short front ends forward in a fringe, or not, as you like.

The second alternative is very new looking, and not so difficult as you might think. Instead of brushing your hair down, you brush it up all the way round, and the curled ends either remains of a perm or result of nightly curlers into a bunch, like little girls do when going to the bath! The one snag, what to do with the ends in the nape of your neck, is to turn them into tiny kiss curls with those pipe cleaner curlers. Of course you can't manage this brushed up line if the hair at the back is very short.

And finally we come to an inspiration for straight-haired girls; Miss X, secretary, who hasn't a natural curl to her name, but achieves exactly this soignée effect by a nice use of little lead curlers!

Don't think, however, that this is easy for the lazy. Every night Miss X brushes her hair till it shines. She combs it down all round from a centre parting and divides it into even sections, each of which is rolled up in a curler — till she has them all round her head. She puts on a pretty net and ties a ribbon round her head; even then it's no good pretending that the curlers look or feel wonderful.

However, she has her reward in the morning when the hair from each curler is brushed separately over one finger into a curl, the three or four at the back usually form into a roll, though they begin by being separate. When it rains, or the weather is damp and muggy, she pins an invisible net over the whole works, and always manages to look nice.

The HORSELESS CARRIAGE

ON an unheralded day in October, 1892, the first motorcar took to the road. This pioneer contrivance was the hatched creation of the brothers Duryen, proprietors of a bicycle shop at Springfield, Mass. The car's body was taken intact from a lady's phaeton, complete with whipsocket. Once its earsplitting, one-cylindered engine was started, there was no way to control the car's speed; it ran between six and seven miles an hour until it hit something or stopped.

Within a few years all sorts of motor vehicles were on the market—electric cars, steam cars, gasoline cars. Less orthodox ones were propelled by compressed air, kerosene, acetylene gas, ether, liquid air, and illuminating gas. An inventor brought out a multiple cylinder engine so designed that the driver, when running on level ground, could disconnect the cylinders not needed and give them a rest.

Still more economical transportation was promised by a spring-motor vehicle, which was supposed to wind itself up by first running down hill. The inventor failed to explain what happened when there was no hill to go down. If none of these engines met the buyer's fancy, there was a French vehicle which actually ran on mothballs, achieving three miles to the pound of days the officers of a motor company might expect to be called out of bed any hour of the night to aid a stranded client.

What to call the new vehicle was a serious question. At first "horseless carriage" was popular. Fearful and wonderful were some of the other verbal inventions which contended for favour. "Polycycle," "petrocar," "autofacere" and "self-propeller" all were in actual use—not to mention "motorcycle," "autogondola," or "road locomotive."

Many new regulations were hastily enacted by frightened legislators, most of whom had never ridden in a motorcar. In 1900 the Federal Government ruled—and for a time it was enforced—that all gasoline must be removed from automobiles before they could be taken on ferriesboats. In the meantime, the prevailing speed limit was eight miles an hour—a limit originally designed to suppress horse racing in city streets. Almost everywhere motorists were expected to stop at the request of a horse driver, but San Rafael, Cal., compelled all cars to stop when within 300 feet of a horse. Chicago decreed that persons wearing eyeglasses could not drive. Spectacles were permitted, but the pince-nez, it was argued, might drop off in a moment of excitement.

English motorists had to cope with an ancient Act of Parliament whereby a mechanical vehicle was obliged to have at least three persons to drive or conduct it, to be preceded by a man with a red flag, to restrict its speed to two miles an hour in towns and four in the open country.

In 1895 the Chicago "Times-Herald" sponsored the first great automobile race. The rules provided that the 92 miles must be covered within 13 hours. Ice was an important item in early racing, cakes of it being placed on the engine at intervals to cool its fever heat.

Eleven drivers signified their intention to participate in the race, but only three could get started. One of these never got beyond the city limits; another ran into a ditch in trying to avoid a wayward farm wagon. The third, a German Mueller-Benz, had only to keep going in order to win. Even that was a sporting proposition; but finally, after eight hours and 44 minutes of clattering and puffing, it lumbered across the finish line. The judges reported that it had "stood the test of the journey, with all its hardships, in a magnificent manner." Included in the hardships were three stops to repair the "sparking machine," and another to retrieve a tire which had rolled off.

The "Times-Herald," with a sponsor's prerogative, wrote a glowing article, but the rival "Tribune" treated the whole proceeding with skepticism: The winning car "hove as though it carried a small earthquake with it and yawed from side to side like a Dutch galiot in a seaway."

Think Before You POSE FOR A PORTRAIT

A perfect pose for a Profile . . . Posed by Miss P. Homer, a charming Hong Kong resident. Miss Homer will shortly be sailing on the Sea of Matrimony.

POSING for a portrait is an art in itself. Many beautiful women and handsome men make very poor photographs, they somehow can't look natural, and that is just what spoils a portrait—an unnatural look. Of course a lot depends on the photographer, all skilful lighting, diffusion, retouching etc., help in making a good picture, but such careful attention on the part of the photographer will be of little help if the 'Pose' is not perfect.

Years ago, photographers always advised their fair patrons to remove their make-up for 'Still' pictures; they were right then, but now that we have colour-sensitive plates, it is easier and better for them to photograph with Make-Up than retouch the prints.

However, there are two important 'Don'ts' by one of Hollywood's foremost 'Still-Men', that anyone making-up for a portrait must not neglect.

(1) Don't have a monotone! That is if you have a very fair, skin and correspondingly light hair, your powder should be darker than usual otherwise you will photograph one White Mass, rather than as a face crowned becomingly with blonde hair.

(2) Do not neglect your neck and hands, the latter may not be taken care of if only a 'Bust' is required. Always remember that the lens of a Camera is more perceiving of defects than the human eye. A perfectly made-up face above a neglected neck or forgotten hands will produce disappointing results.

A lady with soft features, without any Make-Up, will appear blurred and indistinct in a photograph; make-up is very essential for outlining and defining such features. If her eyes and eyebrows are accentuated as Jean Muir's, at the right side of the illustration, she is more likely to get very satisfactory results. At the same time, they should not appear too Made-Up, however, as Miss Muir's do in the left side of the photograph. Also, notice how much more becoming the coiffure that lies close to the head is to Miss Muir at the right, than the loose hairdress at the left.

The following few hints, if followed carefully, are sure to improve your portrait and save you a lot of disappointment.

(1) If your face is inclined to be corpulent, never take a 'full-face' picture; a profile will look much more flattering for your type.

(2) Thin women are advised to wear light-colored clothes for photographs and the 'Stylish Stunts' should affect dark clothes.

(3) Women with thin faces, should arrange their hair in such a way as to give breadth to their looking up into the lens, the nose will look befitting.

(5) Small eyes can be enlarged by Make-Up. Take your eyebrow pencil and draw a fine line under the lashes on the lower lid. This line should be very faint in the middle and darker at the ends. Don't bring it up into the corner of the eye nearest the nose, otherwise it will give the artificial effect which must be avoided at all costs.

Another trick that would make the eyes look larger is to lower your chin and look up into the lens, as advised for a short nose. The eyes are thus made to open widely and seem larger, but on no account must you stare at the lens or the effect may be alarming.

Above all, be natural, never imitate a pose and don't demand the same type of portrait that flatters some one else. You may not be the same type.

faces. The opposite of course, for women with broad faces.

(4) If you have a long nose, ask your photographer to adjust his Camera so that the lens is looking up to your face. This trick will make the nose a triple look shorter in the photograph. If, on the other hand, your nose is too short, then by lowering your chin and

Coolerator

The Air Conditioned Refrigerator

If you own, hire, or are about to hire a Coolerator, please read the following. A Coolerator will give many years of satisfactory and economical domestic refrigeration if it is properly used; the correct usage thereof depends on the following points.

1. DON'T cover the ice with a towel or cloth. It does not conserve the ice, and prevents the action of washed air which is such an important feature of the Coolerator.
2. DON'T ever let your ice compartment get empty. If you are using 15 lbs. of ice daily you will probably find that in the hot weather there is very little ice left in the morning, if any. The result is that the temperature inside rises considerably, and when a new block of 15 lbs. is placed inside, at least 5 lbs. is wasted in cooling the box down again. That is to say, although you are paying for 15 lbs. you only have the benefit of 10. This is all very well for increasing our dividends, but on our side we would rather have a number of satisfied customers than a few disgruntled users. Anyway, how do you get over this difficulty? Simply order a 100 lb. block (or whatever is the maximum capacity of your box) and then top up daily with your regular order. The large block is your reserve, and the small daily block just replaces the natural meltage. Your refrigerator is thus kept much colder all the time, with a consequent reduction in ice usage.
3. DON'T crowd out your ice chamber with bottles, butter etc. You will find that if your Coolerator is used as directed above, there is no need to place anything directly on top, or on the side of the ice.
4. DON'T place bottles of freshly boiled water or hot dishes in the refrigerator. After boiling your drinking water, allow the bottles to stand for at least two hours in the open to let them cool down.
5. DON'T let the inside of your refrigerator become dirty. The interior is coated with white Dulux, and may easily be cleaned with a damp rag. Similarly, make sure the drainage tap is clean, otherwise water will be found inside the refrigerator.

THOSE ARE THE MAIN POINTS, BUT IF YOU HAVE ANY QUERIES, PLEASE DON'T HESITATE TO RING US UP.

I Married A Newspaper

And The Nuptial Vow Should Have Read: "For Better Or For Worse-And How!"

ONLY a small one. That was where I erred. Before I plunged into this marriage business I met the wife of an editor of a great daily. She was a happy, contented woman who played golf with her husband in the afternoon and spent Sundays driving through the countryside with him at the wheel.

I never see mine. Not that he neglects me; the morning kiss is as warm and loving as the caresses of my pre-nuptial romance, and one Wednesday last month, he took me to the flicks. You can't accuse a man of neglecting you when gives you all his spare time.

Before he became a stranger, my husband used to free lance. In those days he worked at home. I fixed up a small corner of our two room flat, and he used to pound along on the typewriter while I pattered about with the domestic chores. We were perfectly happy. I learned that there was no division between work and daily living; never spoke until I was spoken to; acted as a bulwark between him and a world full of unpaid bills, noise, stupid people, and was proud to sleep with a Creation when other women could only boast a man.

There were strange mad days when he banged the lid of the typewriter down, jammed a hat over my eyebrows, and went dancing down the stairs into the street, me following like a little brown rat after a pied piper. Pie-eyed days — lovely days — days when we chased impulse round every corner, and ordinary people were fantastic, and fantastic people ordinary, and oranges were romantic, and lemons bilious, and the old woman who sold them, the original witch.

Black days when he would come rushing into the room, shouting "I'm through!" Agonised hours restoring the confidence of a man who at twenty-six was firmly convinced he would never write another line. Delicate handling of tremendous trifles; headaches, relatives, the young lady who roller skated on the roof, and urges to go on a blind with the housekeeping money. I was at once a psychiatrist, a diplomat, a financial wizard, a secretary, a literary critic, a nurse, and a wife. I was supremely busy and supremely happy.

That was before Marjorie came into being. The morning I told him, he relapsed into gloomy silence. At last he said: "I'll have to get a job; babies need regular feeding." Though I was disappointed about the way he took the news, I was glad enough to hear his decision. Story cheques are uncertain, and his one book had not been a financial success. Balancing the budget was like solving an algebraic equation, full of unknown possibilities, most of which were nebulous or wispy. It had been fun, but with a baby coming unpaid bills would be hauntingly terrifying. "What sort of job?"

"I'll go and see Emerson—he's running the—; used to be at school with me." "That'll be marvellous," I said and meant it. "I shall hate being tied to a paper," he bent down and kissed me, "but you're worth it."

Well, I'm not. The finest woman in the world wouldn't be worth the sacrifice. Before he became a newspaperman, my husband had intuition, imagination, feeling. If we felt like it, we worked on Sundays and took a Tuesday off, or any other day. We were mobile. We had fun.

The paper has sucked the life blood out of him. Emerson got sick, and they made my husband editor. The paper being small, it couldn't afford the understudies who make life easy for the man who handles the controls of a big show. My husband works sixteen hours a day, six days a week. On Sunday he arrives home at three o'clock in the morning, and sleeps through till Sunday night. That's pretty terrible hours, but from my point of view, what's worse is that he enjoys every minute of them.

He's in love with the paper. It lives, breathes, spews out extras, and is more jealous than a Spanish mistress.

Of course, I've tried to fight it. Three hours after Marjorie was born, he rang up the hospital to ask how I was. That was the last I heard of him until I was back home and the baby two weeks old. We had a show down. He apologised, explaining that the Directors had at last agreed to his proposals for a brighter, bigger and better paper, and he had been busy putting his plans into effect. "I'll mean more money, you'll be able to afford a maid," he added, and patting me on the head, went on with a leader. "I don't want a maid, I want you," I said, desperately. His brow wrinkled: "How many's there in Mediterranean?"

A week later I decided to leave him. All that day I waited in a fever of impatience. At last I heard his latchkey in the door. Drawing myself up, I prepared to deliver the speech. I had been rehearsing for hours. He came into the room, clasping his temples. "Get me an aspro; I've got a ghastly headache," he said and slumped into a chair. I hurried to the medicine cupboard. "Weak," you say? Well, have you ever seen an editor with a headache? It is the worst headache that ever assailed a mortal man. There never was, never will be one equal to it. It pounds like the fiends of hell; it tears the vitals right out of one's quivering body. Going blind is a pleasure compared to staring at those damned typewriter keys for another hour. He reached for the bottle like a little child. "Thank you—I don't know what I should do without you," he said with a wan smile.

After that I gave up. My friends envy my lot. "How marvellous to have a husband who is so devoted to his work," they say, inwardly wondering if Tom or Dick is hanging around at home, impatiently waiting for them to finish that last rubber.

IN TIME OF WAR

Not even the seas between,
Or a tidal river,
Not even a mountain wall!
Nothing, perhaps, but a field of winter wheat,
Or white-and-gold water
meadows,
Nothing, perhaps, but a stagnant ditch full of frogs.

Can it be true, as they say that all men are brothers

Who have come the long road together
From the slime of the sea's verge,
From the steaming, malignant jungle,
From the cold cave in the river
cliff
And the pelt of the wild beast for cover,
Through the first ploughed fields,
the first orchards?
Brothers who— and with pleasure—
Through remarkable generations
Have bred us to this:
A blood-stiffened uniform,
A flea-ridden livery
Fit for the servants of guns.

How, then, shall we know the enemy?

Not by their eyes, their hands,
Not by their broken and speechless mouths,
Not by the way they vomit or moan in pain—
Oh not by any of these!
Not by their stinking and gangrenous flesh,
Not by their impotent, angry shame
When they foul their beds,
Not by their homesick tears,
Not by their dreams.

How shall we know

Whom to hate,

Whom to kill?

That of all things is most simple,
Arranged, as it is, by the leaders:
The costumes of War—

Designers of tunics to Slaughter,

Hatmakers to Murder—

Will show you the enemy

Though he be your own fa-

Note but the colour,
